TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber.

January, 19th, 1914.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor A. Alexander in the chair.

Present—Reeve Denison and Councillors Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Dickinson and Graham.

A communication was read from Mr. George Stevens asking to be appointed to the position of taking charge of the fire engine, at the same salary and under the same conditions as those of the late engineer.

On motion of Coun. Waller and Reeve Denison, the matter was referred to the Fire, Water, Light and Streets Committees to arrange and report.

It looks very much as though, arrangements will be made whereby Mr. Stevens will be given charge of the fire engine and the steam roller. His duties would also necessitate his looking after all the other machinery used by the town and keeping them in good repair.

A Communication was read from W. J. Gage, secretary of the National Sanitarium Association, asking for a grant to assist in the maintenance of that institution.

Ordered laid on the table until the estimates are prepared.

A communication for the Canadian Municipal Journal asking subscriptions for their publication was ordered filed.

A communication was read from C. N. Loucks, Secretary of the Fire Department, stating that the company recommended the appointment of Fred J. Vanalstine, as Chief Engineer, and C. W. Conway, as Assistant Engineer. Laid on the table until late in the evening.

Mr. Jas. McMurrin, in a letter to the council, stated that he would not accept the position, Sanitary Inspector at the salary of $50. If his services were not worth $75 per annum, he would ask that his resignation be accepted.

Reeve Denison stated that there were others who would take the office and he was in favor of accepting Mr. McMurrin's resignation.

Move by Reeve Denison, and seconded by Coun. Waller, that Mr. McMurrin's resignation be accepted.

Lost on the following division:

Yeas—Denison, Waller—2.
Nays—Alexander, Dickinson, Graham, Walters, Wiseman.

On motion of Councillors Dickinson, and Graham, the communication was ordered laid on the table.

Coun. Carson entered.

A by-law was passed appointing Fred J. Vanalstine, chief engineer; and C. W. Conway, assistant engineer of the fire brigade.

SIR JAS. WHITNEY'S CONDITION ALMOST UNCHANGED

Sir Jas. Whitney's condition a continuation of the restlessness that has been with him since returned to Toronto.

The bulletin issued at 10 o'clock Wednesday night, at the G. Hospital read as follows:

"Sir James Whitney was resting during the afternoon, but he is now. His general condition is fair."
"(Signed) Alexander McPhedran."
"R. A. Pyne."

Following an examination by McPhedran and Dr. C. K. Clark 11 o'clock Wednesday morning McPhedran stated that although Prime Minister had put in a restless night, he believed he much better than he has been since was brought home from New York.

Practically all the time the patient is delirious, not altogether unconscious, but given to more or less wandering. Dr. McPhedran does not think Sir James appreciates the fact that he is back in Toronto.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Mr. Bickerdike, M. P. for one Montreal constituencies, has introduced a bill to abolish capital punishment. The movement has received certain impetus in Canada through the manner in which the pardon power has been exercised. A has grown up that a convicted chance of escaping the gallows depends largely on the number of friends who will hustle around get petitions signed, and interpose letters to influential persons. So there is a disposition to say only friendless manslayers are hanged. It would be better to abolish capital punishment altogether, so that will be the same law for all.

Probably Parliament will not pass a capital punishment at present Mr. Bickerdike's bill will serve a useful purpose if it makes our legislators consider some more satisfactory of reviewing death sentences.

ENTERPRISE.

The Finance Committee were given power to act in reference to the matter of insurance on road roller.

Dr. G. H. Cowan, Medical Officer of Health, addressed the council at some length, concerning the appointment of an Indigent Officer, whose duty it would be to work in conjunction with the Medical Officer of Health. He would be satisfied to fill both offices provided his remuneration was increased accordingly. He thought about $200 per annum would be a fair salary. The doctor went into considerable detail concerning the duties of the two officers. He did not wish immediate action, but thought it best to bring it before the council at an early date in order that the members might have ample opportunity to think it over.

LORD STRATHCONA IS DEAD

THE END CAME PEACEFULLY

Lord Strathcona passed peacefully away in his sleep at 2.15 (Wednesday) morning. It was realised from an early hour Saturday morning that the venerable statesman was passing into the depths of the great river.

His Lordship on several occasions within the last few years had been confined to his house for an odd day or two, but at such times, despite his heavy burden of years, his friends always had confidence in his power to resist illness. Unhappily such confidence could not be entertained on this last occasion. An attack of catarrh which would be comparatively trifling matter for a man in the prime of life, was too severe a strain for one who had passed the four score and ten mark well over three years ago. The malady completely prostrated Lord Strathcona, eventually inducing heart weakness. The aged patient sank into a state of coma, and the end came perfectly peacefully.

Family Were Present.

Hon. Mrs. Howard, his daughter, who succeeds to the title, and the other members of the family were at Grosvenor Square at the time. The King and Queen and other members of the Royal family made repeated inquiries, expressions of sympathetic interest also being received by hundreds from all sections of London's diplomatic, philanthropic, and social life.

"The Light House"

Until two months ago Lord Strathcona attended his office in Victoria street daily, arriving at ten o'clock or even earlier, and remaining often till after nightfall. The Canadian Office in fact, had been nicknamed in the vicinity "The Light House" through the windows frequently being illuminated long after the remainder of the street was in darkness. There is not the least doubt that sheer force of will alone enabled Lord Strathcona to continue his activities even at such a venerable age.

A Great Blow.

The death of Lady Strathcona in November last was a great blow, but even then the venerable High Commissioner's force of will asserted itself. He insisted on attending the funeral, and a week later presided over the Hudson's Bay meeting. This was his last appearance in public.

His Lordship had booked a number of engagements for the next few months. Less than ten days ago he wrote correspondents, that although he was suffering from cold, he hoped to be about again in a few days.

Colonial Secretary Harcourt, referring to Lord Strathcona recently, said: "He wears the laurels or rather the maple leaves of unselfish, industrious life, which have made his name known to all who have seen him."

The Passing of a Great Master Builder.

A great figure has gone from the scene: a master builder has laid down his tools for other artisans. Sir Donald A. Smith, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, P.C., G.C.M.G., has passed in the fullness of time with the record of a life well lived and a work well done.

His life is spread over the most important epoch in Canadian history: every page is tinged with romance. In all the period of rugged and poetic charm, as well as of development, his is an incomparable figure. A man of titanic gifts, of unflinching fidelity, of heroic purpose, of indomitable energy, of character, of sound judgment, of tenderness, of diplomacy, and withal a supreme and life-long optimism. Lord Strathcona passes into the history of this age a monument to the ideal of Canadian nationhood, and an inspiration to the hopes and ambitions of the northern empire of this continent of North America.

A Man of Achievement.

Laudatory or fulsome praise has never been showered on Lord Strathcona. His personality was a barrier against that. His laurels were the laurels of achievement, and he achieved because he knew no other creed. As an Imperial statesman who had won the confidence and approbation of his Sovereign, as an administrator of unique and far-seeing powers, as a railway builder who welded the outlying parts of Canada into one Dominion, as a peacemaker in time of trouble, and as a man who by diligent service won advancement from junior clerk in an isolated post of the Hudson Bay Company to that of Governor, is a

CONDITION UNCHANGED

Last Night's Bulletin Concerning Premier Whitney Discouraged

TORONTO, Jan. 20. — Sir Whitney was back again among own people yesterday. The journey from New York on Saturday was accomplished without a shock to the distinguished patient and shortly after his admission to the General Hospital at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and after nourishment, he fell into a sleep.

At 9.45 last night Dr. Ale Phedran, in attendance on Sir Whitney at the General Hospital issued the following bulletin:

"Sir James has been pretty less for the last two or three more restless than before and quite so well. He is not taking nourishment and not sleeping, expected to sleep soon."

At Toronto yesterday the conveying the patient was disengaged from the train and was placed in the ambulance and hospital were in readiness. Dr. Pyne stood off plainly tired after his all vigil. He did not have a wink of sleep, and after speaking to the paper men, followed his patient to the hospital, and then went home to rest.

The second man to die in the chair for the murder of Patrick Burns in New York City two years ago. "Big Bill" Lindley, Meuhfield's pal, was executed on May 5 last.

Both Lindley and Meuhfield left statements absolving Ralph Furcolo of any connection with the crime. Furcolo is serving a 20-year sentence. Burns was robbed and shot down in his saloon in the Bronx early on the morning of Feb. 11, 1912.

Another Typhus Ship.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Another typhus ship, the third within two weeks, was detained at quarantine yesterday by Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, health officer of the port. The vessel is the Kaiser Franz Joseph I. of the Austro-American Line.

The patient on the vessel was removed to Swinborne Island, where the case was diagnosed yesterday as typhus. One hundred and forty-nine steerage passengers who had been exposed to infection were detained at Hoffman Island for observation until the incubatory period of the disease terminates.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, 20.—To be locked up himself in a cell in which he was about to incarcerate a prisoner, was the novel experience of Chief of Police W. this town. Thomas Connolly was mandated to the cells on a drunken disorderly charge, having not been recovered from the drink. He was arrested, to stand trial. Chief turned his back to the prisoner for a moment in the corridor of police cells, when Connolly seized officer, and, thrusting him into a cell, locked the door and decamped.

The noise raised by the imprisoned policeman finally brought assailed and Chief Watt was liberated. Connolly was found in a barroom, giving the barkeeper for a drink. He fought all the way back to the cell, but was finally locked up.

When left alone Connolly set to the mattresses of his cell and his shouts only saved him from a fiery death. He was taken to another cell and locked up after another fight.

Caught In Quicksands?

PLYMOUTH, Jan. 20.—"The marine 'A 7' must be found" was the order issued yesterday at the office of the naval commander-in-chief, who determined that the search for the fated vessel, which has been missing since Friday, when she disappeared with her crew during manoeuvres here, shall not be given up.

From early morning 12 destroyers working in pairs, have steamed up and down, sweeping with the sandy bottom of Whitesand but thus far without result. The quest is to be continued through the week if necessary, but the impression is growing that the vessel may already have been swallowed by the quicksands which prevail in the vicinity.

Relief Fund Goes Back.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Jan. 20. cause of the refusal of members of the Western Federation of Miners to accept the $30,000 collected from citizens of the copper country for relief of families who suffered from the Italian Hall disaster, on Christmas Eve, the money may be returned to the donors.

The relief committee will distribute the money this week though union men declare they are able to take care of the sufferers without assistance.

Fined for Having Bad Eggs.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—For selling in their storehouses eggs unfit for human consumption, Armour and Swift & Co. were yesterday fined $500. In the same court eight other dealers were fined $25 each for the same offence. The court explained that it was the duty of the large companies to set an example to the smaller ones, and for that reason they served severer punishment.

Giving Him a Tip.

Winnipeg Jail Gives Details of

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 20.—Bail amounting to $20,000 was insufficient to release Percy Hagel, John Krafchenko's counsel, when application was made by R. A. Bonnar, K.C., counsel for Hagel, before Sir John Macdonald, yesterday afternoon. Hagel was brought before the court, charged with unlawfully assisting Krafchenko to escape from custody.

"I've defended a good many murderers, and none of them was ever hung, and I don't want this one to hang. If we can't get him on the street one way we will have to try another." According to John H.
Buxton, under arrest for assisting in the escape of Krafchenko, testifying yesterday afternoon before the royal commission, Percy Hagel, who Buxton claims engineered the whole plot for escape, had no other motive than shown in the foregoing statement, made to him by Hagel.

Buxton, who was formerly secretary of the Winnipeg Builders' Exchange, told his story without reserve, and it was stranger than any dime novel. It was Buxton who on Sunday night led the police to the sensational and unexpected arrest of Krafchenko. He had then been under arrest nearly twenty-four hours, and as it was his first time behind the bars he quickly caved in and told all he knew to Mayor Deacon.

It is generally understood that Buxton will be given immediate immunity, while the charges against Percy E. Hagel, counsel for Krafchenko, Constable Reid and John Westlake, who sheltered Krafchenko in his room, will be pressed to the limit.

He detailed the whole working out of the plot. The gun and rope were supplied by Buxton to Constable Reid through Hagel, ad taken by Reid to Krafchenko's cell. Buxton secured the gun only after a good deal of trouble, having forced a boy in Ashdowne's hardware store, over whom he had influence, to steal the gun, a Colt automatic. At Hagel's request he bought a bank of ordinary cotton clothesline, which was also given to Reid.

Over and over again Buxton declared that he had no motive whatever himself in assisting, and that it was only when too late that he realized that he was making a fool of himself.

Frank Holt, a young man who shared the rooms with Westlake on Toronto street, declared that he had been forced into the affair unwill-ingly, and that he kept quiet because he was afraid to "split." He took no active part.

His Holdings Have Been So Disposed as to Prevent Any Depression In Canadian Securities After His Death, Declares Financial News—
No Bulletin Issued After Yesterday Afternoon.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—At 2 o'clock this (Tuesday) morning the condition of Lord Strathcona was stated to be extremely grave and the end wa expected at any moment.

No official bulletin has been issusince yesterday afternoon.

The Financial News give promience this morning to the statement that such dispositions have been made with regard to Lord Strath-cona's very large holdings in leading Canadian securities as will completely obviate any shock to the market in the event of the present grave apprehensions being realized.

The arrival in London Sunday morning by special midnight train from Edinburgh of Mr. Garson, Lord Strathcona's solicitor, reminded the public that Lord Strathcona's interests in this country are concentrated with Mr. Garson's law firm of Edinburgh.

Mr. Garson has long been entrusted with Lord Strathcona's will and all matters concerning the peerage and succession, also his British properties which consist chiefly of the London residence in Grosvenor Square, "Debden Hall," a fine country seat in Essex, "Glencoe" with its moors and deer forests; and also "Colonsay," a large island off the west coast of Scotland which he acquired from the executors of the late Sir John McNeill some years ago.

It is said that since the death of Lady Strathcona, a few weeks ago, the High Commissioner has lost his old zest for life.

Caught In Quicksands?

MOUTH, Jan. 20.—"The subject 'A 7' must be found" was the order issued yesterday at the office of the commander-in-chief, who is directed that the search for the ill-fated vessel, which has been missing since Friday, when she disappeared with her crew during manoeuvres shall not be given up. Early morning 12 destroyers, sailing in pairs, have steamed slowly down, sweeping with cables the bottom of Whitesand Bay, but as far without result. The search is to be continued throughout the week if necessary, but the impression is growing that the "A 7" ready have been swallowed up in quicksands which prevail in the vicinity.

Relief Fund Goes Back.

GHENTON, Mich., Jan. 20.—Because of the refusal of members of the Western Federation of Miners to the $30,000 collected from the people of the copper country for the families who suffered by the Hall disaster, on Christmas, the money may be returned to donors. A relief committee will try to raise the money this week, and all union men declare they are to take care of the sufferers in their assistance.

WORKMEN ARE KILLED.

Six Meet Death In Explosion at C.N.R. Construction Camp.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Six men were killed and three others seriously injured in a dynamite explosion late on Saturday on the C.N.R. construction work at Ross' Point, Que., opposite Arnprior. The name of the dead so far as known are:

Joseph Elliott, aged 22, single, Bristol Mines.

Stephen J. Trudeau, aged 32, with a wife and three children, at Bristol Mines.

Duncan Herron, aged 55, married, but leaving no children, of Bristol Mines.

The other three were foreigners.

The accident occurred on the Pembroke-Ottawa branch of the C.N.R. The men were engaged by Brennan & Grant, contractors, in excavating rock for a bridge pier, and had exploded one blast successfully. Another had been put in, but a premature explosion caught the gang before they had time to reach safety. Four of the men were killed outright and two died later. There were ten men in the gang, and the one who escaped is a Polish laborer, unable to give anything but the barest details.

GEN. PICQUART IS DEAD.

French Officer Saved Dreyfus by Discovery of Papers.

AMIENS, France, Jan. 20.—The death occurred here yesterday of Gen. Marie-Georges Picquart, commander of the second French army corps, who was, except for the prisoner himself, the most prominent figure in the Dreyfus case. He was in his 60th year.

Gen. Picquart, regarded as one of the most brilliant officers of the French army, rose to high rank at a very early age. He was an Alsatian by birth and an extremely good linguist, and this aided his appointment to the general staff. It was while serving there that Picquart discovered a number of forgeries which had brought about the condemnation of Dreyfus to the horrors of Devil's Island. Picquart thereafter became one of the most enthusiastic appellants for a revision of the judgment on Dreyfus, and his zeal led to his arrest and imprisonment on various charges, which were, however, dismissed for want of evidence.

Robertson, as chairman of the Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education, has now completed his work. The voluminous report is being published by the Labor Department and will be in the hands of the public in a few days.

Dr. Robertson has received numerous invitations to address Boards of Trade and Canadian Clubs throughout the country. He has accepted some of the invitations and will outline the nature of the recent worldwide movement for the training of the productive, constructive and conserving workers of the foremost countries.

Dr. Robertson asserts that Canada, from the alertness, intelligence, energy, ambition and wealth of its people, can do more in the next ten years than any other country has done. She has greater need and wider opportunity. She can reap more benefit than any other has won.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—"The King has got to see us or we shall know the reason why," Mrs. Dacre-Fox told a meeting of militant suffragettes in London last evening. It was at a meeting called to re-open the campaign for equal suffrage after the recent lull and the women were full of fight.

Mrs. Dacre-Fox said the suffragettes had not anticipated that His Majesty would refuse to see a deputation of women on Jan. 7, but if he had been advised by his Ministers not to see the women he could not shield himself that way.

"He has got to see us," the speaker added, "or we shall know why. The next deputation will go to Buckingham Palace prepared for all emergencies."

Churchill and Lloyd George at Loggerheads Says Telegraph.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that the antagonism between, Winston S. Churchill First Lord of the Admiralty, and David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the question of naval estimates has reached a point where the resignation of one of these Ministers is a possibility of the next few days.

A majority of the Cabinet support Chancellor Lloyd George in opposing Mr. Churchill's estimates, and should the First Lord resign rather than reduce the estimates, the paper adds, the whole Admiralty Board will resign with him.

It is stated that a meeting of the Cabinet will discuss the navy question and Mr. Churchill's attitude on Thursday.

EXIT EMERGENCY

GOVERNMENT HAS DROPPED NAVAL AID BILL AND HIGHWAYS AID BILL.

Two more tombstones were erected in the Conservative cemetery on the 15th inst., when Parliament assembled for the third session of the Borden Government. Where formerly the monument of the tariff commission bill stood in lonely condemnation of the Government's past there are now three cenotaphs, commemorating the Borden Emergency Naval Aid Bill and the Highways Aid Bill, both of which have been interred without even the grace of a funeral ceremony having been added. Their obsequies came none too soon, for the Emergency was still-born on December 5th, 1912, and the Highways Aid Bill was killed at the close of last session when the Government abandoned it rather than adopt the Senate amendments designed to bring it into accord with the Canadian constitution and provincial rights over highways.

Last year's speech from the Throne was regarded as barren. This year's speech might be regarded as a negation. The speech which was given to His Royal Highness conveyed sympathetic references to the Duchess of Connaught's illness and his own absence in England. It informed the people that there had been an increase in trade and immigration; that there had been a good harvest in the west and that the railways were running so well that they had been able to take care of the crop. Fleeting mention was made of the financial stringency, with the consoling proviso that it was attacking the whole world, so that of course Canada must get its full share.

No mention was made of the fact that trade had declined during the last few months, that the Government revenue was dropping, and that soup kitchens were being found necessary in the larger cities to meet the hunger of the unemployed. It was proudly announced that the Governments' income had been sufficient to meet its expenditures despite the fact that Hon.

real interests of the people were being considered. The whole programme for the coming session of Parliament, scant as it is, has apparently been designed to forget the mistakes of last session and fix things up so as to help the Government itself for the present. As to the people and their requirements they were treated with a fine old Tory contempt.

This however, merely outlines the Borden Government's official ideas. When the Opposition defines its programme, it will probably be found that Parliament is forced to undertake legislation more in consonance with the needs of Canada, just as was the case last session and the session before.

MILLIONS FOR FOOD.

SOME EXAMPLES OF HOW TAXES ON FOODSTUFFS OPPRESS THE WAGE EARNER.

The incidence of taxation upon food and the manner in which it weighs with special severity upon the wage-earning classes is easily apparent from an examination of the Customs returns for last year. For instance during the year ending last March, Canada imported from the United States food-stuffs to the value of $23,072,169, on which duties amounting to $4,816,787.82 were collected. From Great Britain food-stuffs to the value of $5,355,568 were imported, and even with the British preference the duties upon this amounted to $1,075,480.88. France supplied us with food to the value of $1,000,001, and before it could reach the tables of the Canadian consumers almost $100,000 had to be paid into the Dominion Treasury. In fact Canada imported food-stuffs from nearly fifty countries during the year, and every morsel brought in had its cost to the Canadian consumer increased from twenty to thirty-five per cent before he could eat it. Is it any wonder that the people of Canada, facing a hard winter, lack of employment, and money stringency, are eager to buy their food in the cheapest market without any artificial inflation by tariff?

EMERGENCY HAS COME HOME.

There was no mention of the Borden emergency or the Borden $35,000,000 present to the Admiralty in the speech from the Throne. Even Mr. Borden has apparently realized that Canada has a financial emergency of its own under his administration, and that the real question is not how to give $35,000,000 for British warships, to meet imaginary troubles, but how to keep $35,000,000 in the country to cope with its present troubles.

and the tariff was judiciously revised in order to meet conditions as they arose. Prosperity was the natural result.

Under two years of Conservative Government the edifice of national prosperity raised during fifteen years of sane Liberal administration has been crumbled, taxes have been increased, expenditures have doubled and more than doubled. Extravagance and corruption have been in evidence on every hand and now the inevitable result has followed. Canada's credit abroad has suffered, her trade has fallen off, her debt has increased, the national income is falling and the financial stringency is such as will make the present winter memorable to many as the worst they have had to endure since 1896.

Providence helps those who help themselves. Under Liberal administration Canada was really governed, and the statesmen who supported Sir Wilfrid Laurier moulded their actions to meet situations as they arose. Under the coalition group of opportunists behind Mr. Borden the reverse has been the case, and even now that Parliament is again assembling, the Government is so tightly in the grip of the highly protected interests that not the slightest move is indicated towards the lowering of the tariff on food or any serious effort to cope with the high cost of living and lack of employment.

SHE HAD A NIMBLE TONGUE.

The Old Duchess Could and Did Swear Like a Trooper.

The old Duchess of St. Albans, who had been the widow of Mr. Coutts, the banker, when the duke, much her junior in age, married her, was one of the habitual visitors at Talmouth. My first view of her, however, was at the Crief hotel, on her way through to Kenmore, when the duchess and her retinue arrived in eight carriages; for though by birth of no family, she had a most exalted idea of her own importance and when paying a series of short visits to country houses was so convinced of the savage condition of the highlands that she traveled always with her own chef and patissier, who alone were permitted to cook her meals at the inns she stopped at on the road.

I shall not easily forget the sight of the disgorging of the duchess' own chariot when it pulled up at the inn door! First emerged her grace herself, an enormously fat woman; then followed her three nieces, daughters of Sir Francis Burdett, whereof the youngest and best looking became inheritor of her wealth, and Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

These young ladies, evidently in mortal terror of their awful relative—not without reason—followed the duchess in single file, dutifully carrying each some article necessary to her grace's comfort—reticule, cushion, wraps, books, footstool and bag of toilet requisites, the duchess' favorite lap dog and her pet parrot in a cage. After them came her grace's private physician, who traveled always in the same carriage as herself, so as to be on the spot, while the duke preferred the coach box to the company inside—and no wonder!

All the time the duchess' tongue was heard going—scolding, complaining, abusing everybody, from her husband downward, in unmeasured terms. The unfortunate nieces came in for no small share of her harangue and earned painfully any share of her fortune she may have left them in her will, for she swore like a trooper or a Billingsgate

Bunsen's Feat After His Gobl Solution Had Been Upset.

The remarkable skill in dealing the material of their experiment some chemists have is well illus by the following story told of the German chemist Professor Robert sen:

Professor Bunsen evaporated hogsheds of water from the heim spring and carefully is from the residue a small quant the salts of two very rare eler caesium and rubidium. He dist these salts in a small beaker of and set them aside on his labor table.

One day a friend came to see P sor Bunsen. Unnoticed by the ch his visitor in leaning against the ratory table tipped over the beake spilled its contents on the floor a his clothing. The solution looke plain water, so the man thought ing of the accident and a few mi later took his departure.

Shortly after the gentleman had Bunsen noticed that the conten the beaker had been spilled. Inst he ran out to the street, overto friend and brought him back attacking the whole world, so that of course Canada must get its full share. No mention was made of the fact that trade had declined during the last few months, that the Government revenue was dropping, and that soup kitchens were being found necessary in the larger cities to meet the hunger of the unemployed. It was proudly announced that the Government's income had been sufficient to meet its expenditures despite the fact that Hon. Mr. White had been compelled to borrow $45,000,000 in England during the year at high interest, and would have borrowed more, but that the British financiers shooed him off.

No mention was made of the Senate whose reference of the Naval Aid Bill to the people and amendments of the Highways Aid Bill had caused the Government so much disappointment. It is improbable that this neglect was caused by courtesy owing to the fact that the Speech was delivered in the Red Chamber. In fact the Government in omitting any reference to the Upper Chamber tacitly admitted that the Senate by refusing these abandoned measures had performed its proper functions in conserving the interests of the people. Further assurance to this effect, although not in consonance with Mr. Borden's pre-election promises, was conveyed in the announcement that the Government intended to introduce a Bill by which it could give the four Western Provinces two more Senators apiece, in the hope before long of aiding the Grim Reaper in effacing the present Liberal majority.

The only concrete legislation promised was the long deferred Redistribution Bill, which was merely mentioned, and bills relating to the Civil Service and to Trust and Loan Companies.

Beyond this the main items of the Speech were congratulatory paragraphs regarding the completion of the National Transcontinental Railway, which was so bitterly opposed by the Conservatives; the progress of the Hudson Bay Railway, which was started by the late Liberal Government and has been botched by the present administration; the development of Canadian ports, following out the programme initiated by the Hon. J. Israel Tarte and elaborated under the Hon. Mr. Brodeur, and a felicitation of itself by the Government on the Government on the Agricultural Instruction Aid Act, which was founded on the advice of the Technical Education Commission, appointed under the late Liberal Government.

Almost at the last came the most important item from the Government point of view—announcement that the estimates would be promptly brought down, so that the Ministers could have plenty of money with which to carry on their extravagances. With unnecessary irony it was stated that the estimates "have been prepared with due regard to the necessary development of the resources of the Dominion coupled with careful attention to economical administration." If the latter provision is rigidly adhered to it will be a great surprise and disappointment to the Hon. Messrs. Rogers, Hughes, and Reid, et al.

The tariff as was expected, was studiously avoided. There was no hint that the high cost of living needed any attention; no suggestion that the present to the Admiralty in the speech from the Throne. Even Mr. Borden has apparently realized that Canada has a financial emergency of its own under his administration, and that the real question is not how to give $35,000,000 for British warships, to meet imaginary troubles, but how to keep $35,000,000 in the country to cope with its present troubles.

WHERE IS PROVIDENCE NOW? ITS BENEFICENCE CEASED WITH DEFEAT OF LIBERAL GOVERNMENT.

The Speech from the Throne made reference to several conditions in Canada, but with a certain political cunning Premier Borden avoided mentioning that the Government was facing decreased revenues and declining trade, while the people as a whole were enduring the most acute period of hard times that has afflicted Canada since the Liberal Government came to power in 1896. Whether or no there is any truth in the Conservative argument that there was prosperity under the Laurier Government merely because Providence was on his side, there is grim reality in the replies of many Canadians out of work and depending upon charity for warmth and food, that they are having a very bad time because Providence is not on Rorden's side. Canada is learning that it is unwise to fly in the face of Providence.

THOUSANDS OUT OF WORK. TORY MISGOVERNMENT LEADS TO LACK OF EMPLOYMENT.

For almost the first time since Canada was rehabilitated in 1897 by the Fielding tariff and the wise administration of the Laurier government, Canada is now suffering owing to a serious business crisis, with consequent lack of employment. In Toronto it is stated that at a conservative estimate there are 15,000 men walking the city streets in search of employment, while this number is being considerably increased, no less than 2,500 men having lost their jobs between December 20th and the New Year. So serious has the situation become that the city council has had to take cognizance of it and Civic works are being arranged in the hope of furnishing employment for these men. There is Homeric justice in the fact that Tory Toronto is one of the worst sufferers from Tory misgovernment.

At Winnipeg it is reported that between 3,000 and 5,000 men are out of work, while their number is being considerably increased.

At Regina, Saskatchewan, the position has become so acute that the unemployed have threatened violence in the hope of attracting attention to their misery. The police found it so difficult to cope with the situation that preparations were made to bring out the militia and put the city under martial law in case of emergency.

In Montreal every charitable institution is taxed beyond its limits, and at several points "bread lines" have been established with such effect that men whose only misfortune was that they had no work to do gathered at midnight to wait hours in the cold for their dose of bread and coffee.

From every part of Canada come reports of hard times, retrenchment and lack of employment. It is impossible not to contrast these conditions with those which prevailed during the fifteen years of Liberal administration and during the first year of the present Government.

It is impossible to argue that the methods of the present extravagant opportunist Government have nothing to do with this state of affairs, so disastrous to a young and prosperous country as Canada. During the Laurier administration national expenditures were kept within reasonable limits while proper care was taken to spend whatever money was necessary on national development while the duke preferred the coach box to the company inside—and no wonder!

All the time the duchess' tongue was heard going—scolding, complaining, abusing everybody, from her husband downward, in unmeasured terms. The unfortunate nieces came in for no small share of her harangue and earned painfully any share of her fortune she may have left them in her will, for she swore like a trooper or a Billingsgate fishwife the whole time.—Lady Login in Cornhill Magazine.

Chinese Idols.

The Chinese, according to many writers, are the most exacting of worshippers. When they pray to their gods they ask for definite material results and they expect results. The life of the idol in China is precarious. Gifts are heaped before it only as long as it seems to be bringing about the wishes of its followers. If the shrine upon evil times and disappointments worships their homage soon ceases. Not only do the gifts cease, but the faithful people of the countryside come in a body and smash the idol to pieces.

CHEMICAL EXACTNESS.

His Feat After His Goblet of Solution Had Been Upset.

remarkable skill in dealing with material of their experiments that chemists have is well illustrated following story told of the great chemist Professor Robert Bunsen.

Professor Bunsen evaporated fifty pounds of water from the Dürk-spring and carefully isolated the residue a small quantity of salts of two very rare elements, cesium and rubidium. He dissolved salts in a small beaker of water and set them aside on his laboratory

One day a friend came to see Professor Bunsen. Unnoticed by the chemist he began leaning against the laboratory table tipped over the beaker and its contents on the floor and on the ceiling. The solution looked like water, so the man thought nothing of the accident and a few minutes later he departed.

Shortly after the gentleman had gone Professor Bunsen noticed that the contents of the beaker had been spilled. Instantly he ran out to the street, overtook his friend and brought him back to the

MURDERED BY A MOTH.

A Curious Case and the Evidence Upon Which It Was Decided.

In olden times it was not rare for animals to be accused and convicted of various offenses and given judicial trials, but there is a more recent case recorded, in which a moth was proved to have been a murderer. It was the case of the Princess Caravella, at Naples. After giving a dinner party she proceeded to her room to snatch a few minutes of rest, in order to refresh herself for a dance.

She was discovered lying dead on her bed, with a pistol wound in her heart. Her husband, Prince Caravella, had been noted for his jealous disposition, and as it was certain that no stranger could possibly have been in the princess' room suspicion pointed to him, and he was arrested.

The pistol was found lying near the murdered woman, which in itself was favorable to the prince, for no murderer, unless he courted detection, would thus leave the weapon to be discovered. In spite of this, it was probable that things would have gone hard with the accused but for the shrewdness of a Naples police officer. This man carefully examined the bed-

PECULIAR CLIENTS

Cranks With Whom Lawyers Sometimes Have to Deal.

QUEER CASES OUT OF COURT.

"Ancestor" Clients Are Quite Common, and Their Claims Are Just About as Visionary as Those of Numerous Patent Seekers Are Freakish.

"What is the most peculiar case that has ever been brought to you by a prospective client?" was the question put not long ago by the writer to one of the ablest lawyers in New York.

The lawyer said that probably the oddest client who had ever visited him was a woman about forty years old, who wanted to bring suit against one of the Sunday newspapers for not having printed an account of her latest "social function" on its society page, as she had particularly requested over the telephone.

As the second oddest client, he cited the case of another woman who had come to him in tears and sought to enlist his legal aid in making her husband stop flirting. "The woman assured me that she loved her husband and that she knew her husband loved her, but that he had a habit of winking at every good looking woman he saw," said the lawyer. "When I told her there was no legal redress for her, inasmuch as she said I was a fool if I even thought she or her husband wanted a divorce, she exclaimed that I was the poorest lawyer she had ever heard of and left my office in a rage."

The same question was put to several other lawyers and an unbelievably peculiar assortment of would be clients was revealed through their answers.

One patent lawyer cited the case of a man who asked him to represent him for two months at the patent office in Washington. "I want you to go there, stay there and represent me," he said.

"But," interposed the attorney, "what in the world do you want me to do while I am there?"

The man drew his chair close to the lawyer's and in low tones told the attorney that he had invented an "aeroplane clock," as he called it, and that he wanted him to go to the patent office and prevent any other inventor "from sneaking in a similar invention while the authorities are in a careless mood."

The man seemed to be in his normal senses despite the fact that his highly prized invention was absolutely nothing more than a small watch fastened in a leather case, the sort that may be seen in stores anywhere. When he had imparted this information the lawyer pointed out that there was nothing patentable about his "invention."

"There isn't, eh?" shouted the man. "Indeed there is! Who has ever thought before this of putting a clock in an airship?"

The attorney sought to humor him and said, "Wouldn't a watch in the aviator's pocket do as well?"

The man jumped up. "That's just the point!" he cried. "It would not do as well, because it might fall out."

Against such logic the attorney said

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Own Story.

London, Ont.—"I am a farmer's wife and a very busy woman. Last summer

I was taken with severe pains in my back so bad that I could not get up or scarcely move without pain, and my periods were painful. My husband called in a good doctor and I was under his care for some time, but he did me little or no good.

One day a friend of mine told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had been greatly helped by it. I began taking it and soon got well, and my periods became natural again. Since then I have had perfect health. In fact I have never felt so well in my life. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine many women need. If you think this letter will help other women please publish it."—Mrs. K. C. YOUNG, Tambling's Corner, London, Ontario, Canada.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

WILD PIGS OF BRAZIL.

Fate of a Jaguar That Fell Into Their Merciless Clutches.

The wild pigs of Central and South America have a reputation for ferocity and indomitable pluck and are exceedingly dangerous enemies to meet. Mr. J. Bigg-Wither, in "Pioneering in South Brazil," tells this story of an explorer's experience of them. Elliott, the explorer, and a Brazilian companion named Lopez were camping in the forest between two Brazilian rivers.

"Suddenly they heard, close at hand, a tremendous uproar of grunting and squeaking.

"Pigs!" exclaimed Elliott. "Roast pork for supper!"

"Come on!" was the only comment of Lopez, and he led the way in the bright moonlight toward a little open space among the pines.

"In a few minutes they came to the edge of the clearing, and there they saw, not one pig, but a drove of fifty or sixty, all furious with rage and vainly endeavoring to get at a jaguar that was sitting in fear and trembling on the top of an ant hill, about five feet above the ground.

"Don't fire," said Elliott. "Let's wait a minute. We haven't got too much table tipped over the beaker and its contents on the floor and on nothing. The solution looked like water, so the man thought nothing of the accident and a few minutes took his departure.

After the gentleman had gone on, noticed that the contents of the beaker had been spilled. Instantly he went out to the street, overtook him and brought him back to the laboratory.

Water Bunsen carefully extracted salts from the sleeve of the gentleman's coat and his underclothing. He dried his arm, cleaned off a drop and spattered on his shoe, carefully washed the floor and the table, collected the solutions together, purified them and on evaporation found he had recovered the valuable substance. So perfect was his skill that he had not lost a weighable amount.—The Companion.

Chinese Idols.

Chinese, according to a missionary, are the most exacting of worshippers. When they pray to their idols they ask for definite material blessings and expect results. The life of an idol in China is precarious. Gifts will be offered before it only as long as it is able to bring about the wishes of its followers. If the shrine falls into evil times and disappoints its worshippers their homage soon fades. They do the gifts cease, but the real people of the countryside will live in a body and smash the ineffable symbol.

The man jumped up. "That's just the point!" he cried. "It would not do as well, because it might fall out."

Against such logic the attorney said he found himself helpless, and he told the man he feared the case was too difficult for him to handle.

Another strange client who visited a patent lawyer wanted to secure a patent on a "flower clothespin." The latter was an ordinary wooden clothespin with a little wire point on top. On the latter fresh flowers might be stuck, thereby, according to the inventor, "giving the clotheslines the appearance of flower gardens." He saw a fortune from the sale of his pins in cities.

When the lawyer assured him that, besides the fact that there was more sentimentality than practicability to his invention, a pin stuck in the end of the wood would serve just as effectively as the "invented" piece of wire, the client threatened to bring suit against him for "violation of confidence."

Another patent lawyer said that the oddest client who had ever come to him was a young woman who wanted his help in getting a patent, literally, on an "idea."

"What is your idea?" asked the lawyer curiously.

The young woman refused to tell him, saying that she hesitated to divulge the nature of her idea until it had been secured by patent. "I won't trust anybody with it, not even you," she told the lawyer.

MAETERLINCK ON SPIRITS.

His Opinion About Those Materialized by Mediums.

Maurice Maeterlinck, writing about life after death in the Fortnightly Review, makes these remarks about the so-called "spirits" that are materialized by mediums:

"It is a remarkable thing that they appear to be much more interested in events here below than in those of the world wherein they move."

"They seem, above all, jealous in establishing their identity, to prove that they still exist, that they recognize us, that they know everything, and to convince us of this they enter into the most minute and forgotten details with extraordinary precision, perspicacity and prolixity."

"They are also extremely clever at unraveling the intricate family connections of the person actually questioning them, of any of the sitters, or even of a stranger entering the room. They recall this one's little infirmities, that one's maladies, the eccentricities or tendencies of a third."

"They have cognizance of events taking place at a distance. . . . but there comes from it all no breath, no glimmer of the hereafter, not even the something vaguely promised and vaguely waited for."

"We shall be told that the mediums are visited only by inferior spirits, incapable of tearing themselves from earthly cares and soaring toward greater and loftier ideas. It is possible, and no doubt we are wrong to believe that a spirit stripped of its body can suddenly be transformed and reach in a moment the level of our imaginings, but could they not at least inform us where they are and what they feel and what they do?"

"There isn't, eh?" shouted the man.

"Indeed there is! Who has ever thought of putting a clock in an airship?"

The attorney sought to humor him and said, "Wouldn't a watch in the aviator's pocket do as well?"

The man jumped up. "That's just the point!" he cried. "It would not do as well, because it might fall out."

Against such logic the attorney said he found himself helpless, and he told the man he feared the case was too difficult for him to handle.

The young woman refused to tell him, saying that she hesitated to divulge the nature of her idea until it had been secured by patent. "I won't trust anybody with it, not even you," she told the lawyer.

Like the famous Anneke Jans heirs, there are numerous strange cases of so-called "ancestor clients" to be had from the lawyers.

One of the oddest of these is cited by a New York lawyer of wide practice. "Not long ago," he says, "there came to my office a woman who insisted that she owned the lower part of the Hudson river, having inherited it from Henry Hudson, her ancestor, 'by right of discovery.'"

"If this seems an exaggerated case I shall cite a second one that is stranger still. Last winter a man, who said he had been recommended to me by a 'spirit' at a seance he had attended several nights previous, wanted me to prove his title to the land upon which the subtreasury building stands. He told me that it had been given to an ancestor of his by George Washington out of gratitude for the former's loan of a coat during one of the campaigns of the Revolutionary war. Curious claimants to land through ancestors are regular visitors to lawyers' offices. There are hundreds of stories about them, and the two quoted are fair criteria."—New York Tribune.

"Don't fire," said Elliott. "Let's wait a minute. We haven't got too much ammunition, and we can't afford to waste any."

"The jaguar, with his tail well up in the air, out of reach of the foe, was tottering about on the top of the ant hill, with his four feet close together and turning first in one direction and then in another to meet successive attacks.

"Just then the jaguar let his tail drop. In a second the pigs had laid hold of the appendage and had pulled the beast into the midst of them. A terrible battle ensued. From time to time the massive yellow body of the jaguar would rise above the rolling herd of pigs, and his paws could be seen dealing out deadly blows on every side. Then he would sink again and be buried under the bodies of his raging foes. After awhile the noise began to subside.

"Where's the jaguar?" asked Elliott. "I can't see him anywhere."

"Nor I either," added Lopez.

"One by one the excited pigs moved off. When they had all departed the two men descended into the arena. There were fourteen pigs lying dead or dying on the ground, but there was no jaguar. Presently Lopez stooped down, picked up a fragment of something yellow and, holding it up, remarked:

"Here he is!"

"He had found a bit of the jaguar's skin, almost the only fragment of his body left. He had been torn to pieces and devoured by his vicious foes, and nothing was left of him except a few scraps of skin and hair."

Inflated Theatrical Values.

"The 'show business' proper—namely the business of securing and producing plays for the entertainment of the theater going public—is a business of false and inflated values," writes a prominent theatrical manager in the American Magazine. "Reputations, receipts, salaries, expenditures, costs of production, losses on failure and so on through the list—everything is inflated."

"The $100,000 production probably cost $60,000, out of which, in case of failure, there was a salvage of $10,000. The $50,000 production can easily be duplicated for $30,000, and many a dramatic production has been made for from $4,000 to $6,000 that in the published figures represented an outlay of $25,000 before the curtain rose."

A Cautious Young Woman.

Elizabeth had been strictly trained in the proprieties of receiving gifts of money. Uncle John arrived, a privileged character, and after the custom of uncles produced a quarter dollar. Likewise he offered to go to the candy man's shop across the way on a squandering expedition.

There Elizabeth chose a box of candy at 10 cents. The shopkeeper took the quarter and produced in exchange the box and 15 cents. Elizabeth was polite, but firm, as she refused the change.

"Thank you," she said, "but we are not allowed to take money from everybody."—New York Post.

story only to be paralleled in the pages of fiction. Think of the Scottish lad born in 1820 at Forres in Morayshire, Scotland, which Shakespeare has hallowed in "Macbeth," entering the employ of the Hudson Bay Company in 1838, rising through successive stages over a period of thirty years to the positions of Chief Trader, Chief Factor, Chief Executive, and Governor; Special Commissioner of the Dominion Government in connection with the Red River Rebellion in 1869-70; Member of the Northwest Council, of the Manitoba Legislature, and of the House of Commons for Selkirk in 1871-24 and 8, and for Montreal West in 77-96; High Commissioner for Canada in London from 1896 to this date; promotor of the Canadian Pacific Railway; philanthropist and Privy Councillor, and you have the story of a life spent in great activity and usefulness.

A Fur Trader.

When Donald Smith entered the employ of the Hudson Bay Company at the age of eighteen, he was assigned to a post in far-off Labrador, a thousand miles from Montreal. For thirteen years he was a faithful, painstaking, energetic, astute steward. His balances were on the right side of the ledger, and ultimately he attracted attention. As a fur trader he carried out the motto of the company, "pro pelle cutem," which translators give as an English equivalent, "skin for skin."

Year after year he immersed himself in the wilderness, enduring the rigors of the winter, the pests of the summer, a dutiful servant to a hard master, trading trinkets to the Indians for furs to be worn by the aristocrats of the world's capitals. Companions of his own ilk he had few. The white men in the territory could almost be counted on his fingers, and save for expeditions to outlying posts there was practically no variation in the monotony of his existence.

A Peacemaker in Northwest Rebellion.

About this time two events that had an important bearing upon Donald Smith's future took place. In 1867 Sir John A. Macdonald had brought up in Parliament the question of acquiring the territory of the Hudson Bay Company, known as Prince Rupert's Land. In 1869 the formal deed of surrender was executed. The halfbreed settlers around Fort Garry did not like the change, and feared their lands and rights were being confiscated. Led by Louis Riel, an agitation was fanned into the uprising known as the Red River Rebellion.

Acting as Mediator.

No man knew the state of affairs in the west as well as Donald Smith; probably no name was better known in the country. An offer to act as mediator was accepted by the Dominion Government, and Smith was sent west as Special Commissioner "to inquire into and report upon the causes and extent" of the disaffection. It was a task of extreme difficulty that few men would have cared to accept. Arriving with a small company at Fort Garry, Smith was virtually made a prisoner by Riel, who attempted to deprive him of his authority by wresting his commission away by force. Had he dared, Riel would have taken Smith's life. As it was he gave instructions to his personal guard to shoot Smith down the moment he made any attempt to escape from the fort.

The crowning achievement in Donald Smith's life was the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. British Columbia came into confederation in 1871 on the understanding that the railway would be built. The policy of Sir John Macdonald was to have the railway built by a private company. Rival syndicates wanted the contract. At the head of the Canadian Pacific Company, was Sir Hugh Allen, while the inter-ocean was represented by Senator (later Sir) David L. McPherson. These rival companies could not be brought together, so the contract was made with Sir Hugh Allen. The political upheaval that followed is well known. Mr. Huntington, a member from Quebec, preferred charges in the House that eventually accomplished the defeat of the Government. In the Pacific scandal debate Donald Smith, member for Skelkirk, took an important and distinguished part.

The Mackenzie Government prosecuted the Canadian Pacific enterprise with more or less indifference. Smith was disappointed. The abandonment of the policy of the Macdonald Government had put off its realization for ten years. He knew the needs of the west and was most anxious that railway connection with the west should be established.

A Partner With James J. Hill.

Here Smith made his first venture into railroading. The St. Paul & Pacific were in a state of decrepitude. James J. Hill was agent at St. Paul, and Norman W. Kittson ran the steamboat line from Breckenridge. The three growled about the freight conditions and speculated how they could get hold of the road. Smith, as Chief Executive of the Hudson Bay Company came in frequent touch with George Stephen (now Lord Mountstephen), his cousin, head of the Bank of Montreal. He always talked railroad to him. The plague of grasshoppers of 1873-4-5 had cast its blight upon Minnesota, and the country looked like the top of an old rusty stove. Stephen and R. B. Angus were in Chicago, and had a fortnight to spare. Chance took them to St. Paul and they looked over the railroad proposition. The upshot was that Stephen went to the representatives of the Dutch bondholders in Amsterdam, and got an option of the bonds at thirty cents on the dollar. He then went to John S. Kennedy of New York, who secured an option on the outstanding bonds. In the meantime the grasshoppers had fled, there was a bumper crop, and the railway started to boom. The road was reorganized and out of an investment of $238,000 Stephen, Smith, Hill, Kennedy, Angus and Kittson divided nearly $40,000,000 of profits, of which Smith received about $8,000,000. This fortune gave the final impetus to the Canadian Pacific scheme.

Member of C. P. R. Syndicate.

On the return of Sir John Macdonald to power in 1878 the Minister of Public works, then Dr. Tupper, announced that the Canadian Pacific would be proceeded with on the line of the old policy. It was known now that Smith was behind the project, and subsequently the bargain was made in 1880

CURLING.

The primaries in Group 1, for the Ontario Tankard were played in Kingston on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, Belleville, Brockville, Campbellford, Kingston and Napanee having representatives present.

The draw resulted in Kingston, Campbellford and Belleville getting byes, with Napanee against Brockville in the preliminary round.

The Napanee rinks were successful in their first game, winning by 15 shots.

Napanee's next opponents were Kingston, but their majority was the same, thus entitling them to go into the finals with Belleville, who had defeated Campbellford.

Once more Napanee took the measure of their old friends, winning out by a majority of 19 shots, thus earning the right to go to Toronto, to compete with the winners of the other 15 districts of the Ontario Curling Association for the greatest prize in curling in Canada, the much coveted Ontario Silver Tankard.

FIRST IN DARKEST AFRICA.

Mungo Park's Daring Plunge Into the Heart of the Continent.

Mungo Park started out on his African expedition—the first serious attempt that was ever made to explore the "dark continent"—on Oct. 24, 1795. The lion hearted Scotchman, with two negro servants, set out from Gambia, on the west coast, and plunged fearlessly into the task which before him no white man had ever attempted.

It took a real man to plunge into the unknown interior, filled with tales of the monstrous and the terrible. Huge serpents, roaring lions, great black cannibals, scorching heat, deadly fevers—who would dare to challenge these things? And so Africa remained "dark" until yesterday, as it were, while Moses was battling with his problem in the Arabian wilderness; while civilization was maturing in Egypt and Greece; while Roman republics and empires were rising and falling; while the modern nations were coming into being; while crusaders were fighting and troubadours singing; while Columbus was discovering the new world and Washington was founding the United States of America.

BRITISH UNIFORM

Significance of Those Dispositions on Dress Parade.

STYLES WON BY BRAVE A

Distinctions That Date Back Years and Mark Deeds of Daring on the Battlefield—Brilliant Color Picturesque Costumes.

The khaki service dress of the British army submerges into one dra all the great color that formerly characterized the various regiments during the army maneuvers the hosts of men at arms look all alike. Nevertheless the separate regiments still maintain their individual uniforms for dress parade, and the United States, almost every form is conspicuous by some particular distinction—a distinction that back many years along the path of England's glory.

For instance, sergeants of the 8th Light Infantry are the known officers in the service who wear the sash over the left shoulder. Sergeants formerly wore their sashes in fashion, and in one engagement 100 lieutenants and captains of the 8th Light Infantry were killed, wounded, and the sergeants performed their duties. Thus their triumph was numbered.

The men of the Gloucestershire Regiment wear their badges at the bottom of their headwear as well as at the top, a distinction granted because when the first battalion was defending a important outpost in Egypt in 1882, they were suddenly attacked in the rear but by turning quickly about they fully beat off their assailants.

That picturesque bearskin gaiter cap, worn alone by the Scots Greys, all the cavalry, dates from the time of Ramillies, in 1706, when the British captured three battalions of Picardy French grenadiers.

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers is not only the only regiment that retains the five black ribbons hanging from the back of the collar of the tunic, originally worn to protect the coat from grease used in plaiting a cue or tails. The "flash" was also worn throughout the army while the regiment was abroad, but on its return commanding officer appealed to William IV. to be allowed to retain the flash.

White jackets are worn by the foot guards when not in uniform. The grenadiers wear a goat's hair plume on the left side of the bearskins, a red band round the forage caps, and the buttons of the tunic are set at equal intervals. Coldstream guards wear a red plume at the right side of the skin, a white band on the forage cap and the buttons are set in twos; guards have no plume in the head, a diced band for the cap and the buttons in threes, while the Irish have a plume of St. Patrick's shamrock, a green band for the buttons in fours. The Life guards can always be distinguished from the Second by the sheepskin—black sheepskins for the First and white for the Second.

Member of C. P. R. Syndicate.

On the return of Sir John Macdonald to power in 1878 the Minister of Public works, then Dr. Tupper, announced that the Canadian Pacific would be proceeded with on the line of the old policy. It was known now that Smith was behind the project, and subsequently the bargain was made in 1880 with the syndicate headed by George Stephen. In deference to his expressed wish Donald Smith was not one of the signatories to the contract.

Eminent Service as High Commissioner.

At the age of seventy-six, when most men were facing the twilight of life, new responsibilities came to him. Advancing years did not seem to exhaust his strength nor time impair his faculties. Sir Charles Tupper resigned the post of High Commissioner for Canada in London to become for a brief while Prime Minister, and Sir Donald Smith was induced to succeed him.

"This was an office," he explained, "which those who know me will believe I did not covet."

Other offices had been urged upon him, but he evaded anything that might suggest partyism. The news that he was made High Commissioner was hailed with delight by all sections of the country. It was a striking example of a multi-millionaire at that time of life voluntarily devoting himself to a service that deprived him of all leisure.

Refused Governor-Generalship.

On the conclusion of Lord Aberdeen's term of office as Governor-General Lord Strathcona was named as his successor, but he steadfastly refused every effort to connect his name with the appointment, declaring it was an Imperial office and was the chief link between Britain and her greatest colony. It should not go to a Canadian.

Gift of Strathcona Horse.

In the meantime the great struggle between Briton and Boer had broken out in South Africa. Lord Strathcona was one of the first to perceive the need of a rugged, ardent, mobile force: each man an effective unit, a good shot and a tireless horseman. Following the repeated reverses of those days impelled him in 1900 to offer such a mounted force from himself—as a Canadian—to the Queen and Empire. The offer was graciously accepted, and the entire force of nearly six hundred men, mounted, equipped, transported to South Africa and maintained at his own cost, did signal service. He never measured the expense, although the figures mounted up into the million. To the regiment as he bade them good-bye, he said:

"I am sure you will do as the others have done. You can do no more; you will do no less. God speed you, and a safe return."

Although Lord Strathcona left no son, the title does not die with him. He married Isabella Sophia, the daughter of the late Richard Hardisty, by whom he had one daughter, Hon. Margaret Charlotte, married to Dr. R. J. Bliss Howard, F.R.C.S. By special patent the peerage devolves to his daughter, and from her to the male succession.

while Moses was battling with his problem in the Arabian wilderness; while civilization was maturing in Egypt and Greece; while Roman republics and empires were rising and falling; while the modern nations were coming into being; while crusaders were fighting and troubadours singing; while Columbus was discovering the new world and Washington was founding the United States of America.

But at last the man and the hour met, and the son of the Selkirkshire farmer took his brave leap into the mystery. In the mystery he remained a year and a half, when he reappeared, returned to England and wrote "Travels in the Interior of Africa," a book which is still one of the most interesting in the libraries of the world.

In the year 1805 Mungo Park started on his second trip to the dark continent, a trip from which he was never to return. Resolved, with true Scotch grit, to "discover the mouth of the Niger or perish in an attempt," Park pushed on through the pathless forests until he reached a point between 9 and 10 north latitude, where in attempting to make his escape from the natives, who were about to kill him, he was drowned in the mighty stream, which should be accepted as his most fitting monument.—Rev. T. B. Gregory in New York American.

NAMES FROM THE BIBLE.

Odd Ones From the Old Testament That Pleased the Puritans.

A certain set of Christian names taken from the Bible have been in use so long that we do not think of them as Bible names. Among them are Adam, Moses, Samuel, David, Daniel, Solomon, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Others taken from the saints, like Peter, Paul, John, Stephen and Matthew, originally given to children because they were born on the saint's day, are still so common that we think of them as English names.

These names antedate the use of surnames, as may be inferred from the fact that nearly all of them have given rise to patronymics, like Jacobson, Peterson and Stevenson. In the twelfth century missionaries sent out by the authorities used to baptize whole villages at once and to save time invested all the men with the name of John or some other saint and the women usually Mary or Martha. To distinguish the Johns some additional name like Short or Strong or White or Black was given him by the neighbors, and so Christian names and surnames were united.

After the reformation it became the fashion among the Puritans to give children the names of characters like the Old Testament, and odd ones like Melchisedec or Barzillai were preferred. Among these were Abel, Levi, Jesse, Amos, Asa, Isalah, Ephraim, Gideon, Malachi, Job, Abner, Hosea, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Zechariah, Asher, Eli and hundreds of others.

Flower of the Family.

De Smythe had been waltzing with his host's ugly elder daughter and was now in a corner repairing damages. Here his would be papa-in-law espied him. "D'you know," he remarked, referring to De Smythe's late partner, "that girl is the flower of my family?"

"So it seems," answered the young man. "But it's a pity she comes off so, isn't it?" he added, as he made another vigorous rub at the white spots on his coat sleeve.

and the buttons are set in three guards have no plume in the best a diced band for the cap and the buttons in threes, while the Irish have a plume of St. Patrick's the bearskin, a green band for the buttons in fours. The Life guards can always be distinguished from the Second by the shawl—black sheepskins for the First white for the Second.

There are plenty of other distinctions arranged to tell the regiments. Only lancer regiment that is clothed in scarlet is the Sixteenth, the only grooms in blue the carabineers, household cavalry is the only to wear the cuirass. The Highland infantry alone among highland regiments is not kilted, but wears trousers, shako and not the feather bonnet. The shako is also worn by Cameronians, the only rifle regiment to do so.

A soldier wearing a bugle or shoulder strap belongs to a light infantry regiment, another wearing a fusillier regiment, and a band round a cap with blue marks a soldier of a royal regiment. The only highland regiment with a buckle in the feather bonnet "Black Watch," in all others white.—London Cor. New York une.

Preserving Linoleum.

To prevent linoleum from rotting falling to pieces it should be treated the following manner: See that it is perfectly dry and lay it on the face downward, or it may be over a line with the back on. Make a mixture of linseed oil, red lead and driers to about the thickness of glycerin and give the back a coat of linoleum a thin coat. Let it dry thoroughly, add some more red lead mixture, make it thicker and give another coat. It must be laid before it is perfectly dry change.

OUR GLOBE'S HEAT

In Time, Science Figures, It Will Melt the Planet.

THE PART RADIUM MAY PLAY.

This Mysterious Element, According to Some Theorists, is Apt to Be the Patent Factor in Bringing Our World to Its Prophesied Fiery End.

No man expects to see the end of the world arrive in his day any more than he expects if he is in good health to die tomorrow. Yet there is a widespread and perhaps universal belief that the earth is no more immortal than man, only its term of existence is almost infinitely long compared with his.

Science gives unquestionable support to this view, and every new discovery seems to make more certain the conclusion that our world cannot last forever.

But there are two opposite theories as to the manner in which the earth as the abode of life will come to an end.
One assumes that its destruction will be by heat and the other that it will be by cold. The discovery of the mysterious substance radium, which possesses the property of continually giving off heat, has imparted renewed impetus to the first of these theories, which, it may be remarked, as a matter of curiosity, is in accord with the Bible prophecies.

"The heavens shall roll up as a scroll, and the earth shall dissolve with fervent heat."

A most ominous account of the part that radium may play in the ultimate destruction of the earth is given in a book by Professor J. Joly, entitled "Radioactivity and Geology."

The argument on which the assumption that radium or its "mother element," uranium, may finally bring the world to a fiery end is based on the fact that a particle of radium keeps itself continually by some inner process at a temperature nearly 3 degrees above that of its surroundings. In an hour the radium emits enough heat to raise its own weight of water from the freezing to the boiling point. And this store of heat is so vast that a single atom of radium will continue to give it forth at an unvarying rate for about 2,500 years!

If there were only a certain quantity of radium in the earth which could not be renewed, then we might assume that at the end of two or three thousand years this source of heat would be exhausted.

But radium itself appears to be continually produced from uranium, which is an incomparably more abundant substance. So we conclude that the earth may have been heated internally by renewed supplies of radium for untold millions of years and will continue to be thus heated for millions of years to come.

Now, following a line of reasoning
which would be too long to enter upon here, Professor Joly shows that if at the present time the nucleus of the earth contains as much as one five-hundred-thousand-millionth of a gram
of radium for every gram of ordinary

PASTOR RUSSELL

Cincinnati,
Ohio, Jan. 18.—
Pastor Russell
preached here twice to-day. We report his sermon based upon a preferred translation of Genesis 22:16-18.

The Pastor
first gave a detailed account of the Abrahamic Covenant, which he claimed contains the Gospel in a nutshell. Then he reviewed the history of the Jews, Abraham's descendants, and showed that the Oath-bound Covenant which God made with their great ancestor nearly four thousand years ago had held them separate and distinct from all other peoples.

If it should seem strange that the Almighty should condescend to make oaths to His creatures respecting His gracious gifts, said the Pastor, let us remember that God knew that the Promise attested by the Oath would linger for thirty-nine hundred years without fulfilment. This Divine Oath-bound Covenant has been Israel's Gibraltar. It is the foundation of their nationality, upon which are built all the hopes that thus far have preserved them as a people—
the natural heirs of that Covenant.

Jacob's Promises All Earthly.

From Genesis to Malachi, declared the Pastor, nothing in Scripture implies a change of nature from human to spiritual. Nothing intimates that man will ever become an angel. The prophetic promises, on the contrary, tell of restitution to human perfection and to an Eden home restored —world-wide.

The Pastor then showed that the Jubilee system of the Law of Moses typifies Restitution. In the fiftieth year every slave was liberated, and every piece of property reverted to its original owners. God thus pictured man's return to harmony with Himself—man's liberation from the bondage of Sin and Death, his resurrection to the image of his Creator, from which he fell through sin—and the return of earthly dominion to man.

Then the Pastor briefly reminded his hearers of the wonderful word-pictures of Restitution drawn by Israel's Prophets. Had we the time, he said, it would afford great pleasure to discuss the prophecies respecting the future conditions of humanity, the fulfilment of which is just at the door. The desert shall blossom
as the rose; streams shall break
forth in the desert; all blind eyes shall be opened and deaf ears un-

of thus heated for millions of years to come.

Now, following a line of reasoning
which would be too long to enter upon
here, Professor Joly shows that if at
the present time the nucleus of the earth contains as much as one five-
hundred-thousand-millionth of a gram
of radium for every gram of ordinary matter then its temperature must be rising at such a rate that in about 100,000,000 years the earth will be entirely melted inside.

We do not know whether there is so much radium as that inside the earth, but from what we observe on its surface we conclude that there very well may be. If there is more then the melting will be accomplished sooner.
If there is less it will take longer. But the quantity would have to be very much less than it probably is in order that the heat produced could continue to be radiated away without a disastrous rise in the temperature of the globe.

The same reasoning carried further leads to the conclusion that the earth may have been alternately melted and cooled off several times in the past.
When it is in a molten state the free radiation from the surface produces a crust, which thickens to a certain point, and then the inner accumulation of heat brings about another melting from the interior outward.

The phenomenon of new stars is appealed to as lending support to this view. Again and again astronomers have seen a new star burst forth at some point in the sky. Generally it has been assumed that they are due to collisions in the heavens, but it is perhaps equally probable that they arise from the accumulation of heat in some dark celestial body, causing it to flame out into incandescence. Other stars are known to have disappeared, and their disappearance may have been caused by the cooling off of their surfaces.

Evidently we are only just beginning to understand the meaning of life and death in the universe. But we may be sure that what happens elsewhere happens here and that if the stars are not eternal the earth is no more so.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

MAKING OF MAPS.

The First Attempt Was by Anaximander About 560 B. C.

Anaximander, a pupil of Thales, about 560 B. C., sketched the first map.
It was in the form of a disk. Democritus of Abdera, about 100 years after, with a wider range of knowledge, drew a new map, giving the world an oblong form, showing extension east and west rather than north and south.

The first application of astronomy to geography was made by Pytheas of Marseilles about 326 B. C., he having made the first observation of latitude.
Hipparchus of Nicaea, 162 B. C., first determined latitude and longitude.
Marinus of Tyre, about 150 B. C., was the first to make use of Hipparchus' teachings in representing the countries of the world.

Claudius Ptolemy of Pelusium, Egypt, about 162 A. D., was in reality the first scientific mapmaker. Notwithstanding errors in boundaries and locations, the method was correct. The Romans contributed nothing to mapmaking.
No improvement was made in it from the time of Ptolemy until the thirteenth century, when a map appeared in Italy which was constructed with the aid of a compass.—Exchange.

pictures of Restoration drawn by Israel's Prophets. Had we the time,
he said, it would afford great pleasure to discuss the prophecies respecting the future conditions of humanity, the fulfillment of which is just at the door. The desert shall blossom
as the rose; streams shall break
forth in the desert; all blind eyes
shall be opened and deaf ears un-stopped; and the knowledge of the glory of God shall cover the earth,
as the waters cover the sea.

The speaker also showed that according to the Scriptures the future prospects of Israel are wonderful.
Messiah's Reign is the time for which Israel has so long waited and during which that people will have the Divine blessing and become the channel of blessing to all the families of the earth.

A Heavenly King of Glory.

The Pastor next discussed popular fallacies respecting Messiah. Some have imagined Messiah's Kingdom to be an earthly one and Messiah himself a great man. But this is a mistake. The great King will be, not a man, but a spirit being, Jehovah's honored Agent, whose glory and honor will be far above that of angels. These will be His ministers,
His servants.

To prove his position the Pastor cited Daniel 7:13, 14. There, Messiah is pictured as coming in the clouds of heaven. To Him the Ancient of Days will give the dominion and government, and all peoples, nations and languages shall serve Him. But we are not to expect Messiah to come as a man and conquer the world with cannon and dreadnaughts. God has another method by which earthly powers shall melt before his glorious Kingdom in the hands of Messiah.

Another description of Messiah's Heavenly Kingdom conquering the world is given in the 97th Psalm.
Like David's and Solomon's of old, Messiah's Kingdom will be Jehovah's, but will be higher than theirs
—the spiritual, the Heavenly Kingdom. This Psalm the Pastor then discussed, verse by verse. Destructive judgments as a fire will sweep unrighteous institutions from the world, whether these be backed by Jewish or Gentile capital or arms.
God's lightnings—His revelations—will enlighten the world. Society as at present organized, symbolically called the earth, will see it and tremble. The mountains will melt like wax at His presence.

From the Heavenly ones will come the Message of God's righteousness, and all mankind shall see the glory of the Divine character. All worshippers of idols of every sort shall be ashamed. Those worshipping mammon, stocks and bonds, houses and money, shall be ashamed of all riches for which they cannot account along the lines of the Golden Rule.

The Divine predictions of Mes-siah's Kingdom indicate that it will have a glory and a power superhuman, in the light of which Solomon's glory will fade.

Ready to Die With His Boots On.

On the most trying occasions the coolness of the Duke of Wellington was perfect. The instance given by Colonel Gurwood is quoted in Life.

The duke was once in great danger of being drowned at sea. It was bedtime when the captain of the vessel came to him and said:

"It will soon be all over with us."

"Very well," answered Wellington,
"then I shall not take off my boots."

dustry our amusement.—Oliver Gold-

Curious Experience With a Mexican Cutthroats.

Everybody in Mexico goes about armed. Even the passenger trains on the railroads are guarded by detachments of soldiers who ride in the cars, while on every station platform are seen rural guards armed with rifles ready for an emergency. Strangers have to adapt themselves to the custom of going about armed else make themselves unfavorable specimens in the eyes of the natives. It was a novel experience, however, to see railroad surveyors, when occupied with their peaceful work, armed with their peaceful work, armed with teeth with knives and revolvers. In fact, arms were rare and required in Mexico as a means of defense. As everywhere else, it is to remember, however, to keep and forget that you are armed in

POLLUTED WATER.

Cheap and Simple Method by Which It May Be Purified.

The best thing to do with polluted water is to keep it out of your mouth and wait until you can get some pure water. Of course a man might starve to death in some places following that advice, so here is the next best thing to do. Disinfect the dangerous water. Here is the way to do it.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of chloride of lime in a cupful of water, making sure that all lumps are thoroughly broken up, then add three more cupfuls of water. Stir the mixture well and allow to stand for a few seconds in order that any solid particles may settle.

This mixture, if kept in a tightly stoppered bottle, may be used for four or five days, when a new solution should be prepared. Add one teaspoonful of this milky looking solution to each two gallons of water to be purified and stir thoroughly in order that the weak chlorine solution will come in contact with all the bacteria which may be present. Allow this to stand for ten minutes. This will give approximately one-half part of free chlorine to 1,000,000 parts of water and will effectually destroy all typhoid and colon bacilli or other disease germs in the water. The water will be without taste or odor, and the trace of free chlorine will rapidly disappear. This method is one which is now recommended in the health literature of the country.

Water so disinfected is not dangerous so far as the chloride of lime is concerned if allowed to stand for ten or fifteen minutes after applying. The chief danger is that not enough disinfectant will be applied to render the water safe in all instances.

The English Penny.

The English penny has had a good long inning. For over six centuries it was practically the only English coin, for while the florin did not appear until 1343, the penny was introduced by Offa, king of Mercia, who took as a model a coin struck by the father of Charlemagne.

This penny of Offa's was a silver coin, and it was followed in 1357 by one of gold, and it was not until the time of George III. that copper pence were struck, the present bronze not coming until Victoria had been over twenty years on the throne.—London Chronicle.

Old Time Rowing Costumes.

English rowing men a century ago wore costumes far different from what they wear now. In 1805 it was the correct thing for them to wear a green leather catskin cap with a jacket and trousers of nankeen. In the first university race at Henley in 1829 Oxford wore wearing blue checks, while Cambridge was in white, with pink waistcoats. Broad brimmed heavy straw hats came in a little later.

ous Experience With a Band of Mexican Cutthroats.

Everybody in Mexico goes about armed. Even the passenger trains on most of the railroads are guarded by detachments of soldiers who ride in special cars while on every station platform there are rural guards armed with carbines ready for an emergency. For foreigners have to adapt themselves to the custom of going about armed or make themselves unfavorably conspicuous in the eyes of the natives. As a novel experience, however, to railroad surveyors, when occupied with their peaceful work, armed to the teeth with knives and revolvers. As a matter of fact, arms were rarely used in Mexico as a means of defence. As everywhere else, it is well remembered, however, to keep cool and forget that you are armed in case of quarrel.

Passing of a Picturesque Military Figure of Old Japan.

With the death of Prince Keiki Tokugawa passed the last surviving link between the old and the new Japan. Here was a man who gave up a sceptre of empire to become a citizen, whose magnanimous surrender of ancestral prestige for the sake of his country was but one more example of the capacity of his race for peaceful revolution. The last of the Shoguns was a typical representative of a nation born without a pang. His presence in modern history was like the rise and reform of a Pharaoh from the sands of Egypt. Forty-five years ago this man was the arbiter of the entire orient. To have looked into his face would have been a capital crime.

FOE OF THE FLYING FISH.

Albacore Actually Jump Out of the Water to Catch Them.

The home of the flying fish is along the path of the north Atlantic trade winds. In "Memories of the Sea" Admiral Fitzgerald of the English navy says: that in sailing down the trades you find the sea fairly alive with these fish, which are relentlessly pursued by the albacore, the largest of the mackerel family.

From my commanding position at the end of the jib boom I could look straight down on the strange scene. There was a shoal of some dozen albacore swimming along ahead of the ship. Sometimes one or two of them would dart off on either bow or right ahead for thirty or forty yards and then drop back again until they were straight under where I was sitting. The ship was going about seven knots. As it sailed along the flying fish would rise out of the water before it, spread their wings and soar away to the right or left. Often I could see exactly what happened. As the flying fish rose one of the albacore darted off in pursuit and kept almost underneath him until he dropped into the water again; then there was a splash like the rise of a salmon, and the flying fish flew no more.

But the albacore did not always wait for the flying fish to touch the water. On several occasions I saw them actually take their prey in the air by making a huge jump out of the water.

THE CULINARY ARTIST.

He First Brought Joy and Then Sorrow to His Employers.

Even subalterns sometimes seek in the joys of the palate compensations for deprivations on other fields. Thus on one occasion the chef of a restaurant car, finding himself, for some reason or other, stranded at an unlikely spot in India, offered his services to the officers of an isolated troop of English soldiers, who gladly seized the unlooked for chance. He asked high wages, but by clubbing together they managed to raise them. "Hang it all, if we can't have good theaters and good shops, let us at least have good food!" was the idea on which they acted.

For a time all went well, since the day contained at least one bright spot. But soon inconveniences set in. Reports of the Lucullan meals to be enjoyed at — began to spread, and simultaneously the number of inspections to increase alarmingly. High officers of all grades became suddenly seized with a burning zeal for the military progress of this particular troop and spent hours trotting it out in the morning and further hours administering judicious criticism over an excellent and prolonged dinner. Soon in their hearts the subalterns were cursing the day on which they had set eyes on the restaurant car chef, uncomfortable by the magnificent tips which flowed not into their pockets but into that of the culinary artist. Presently they agreed that even good food can be purchased too dearly and quietly got rid of of nation born without a pang. His presence in modern history was like the rise and reform of a Pharaoh from the sands of Egypt. Forty-five years ago this man was the arbiter of the entire orient. To have looked into his face would have been a capital crime.

In that physically diminutive figure, shrunken with age, but large in the melancholy marks of vanished splendor, was displayed the last extant symbol of what was once the most absolute rule on earth. It was of this man that the people used to say: "His will is law and his voice is thunder." But the man was left; and once stripped of the mediaeval trappings of judicial jugglery and enforced usurpation, the Shogun arose to the true spirit of his race, heard the cry of the people, descended to the level of the multitude, and became as one of them, a subject of the sovereign he once outshone, himself a partaker of the freedom he bestowed upon his country.

The figure of a Shogun, always appealing to the western imagination, first cast its shadow across the kingdom of Japan in the 12th century. The Shoguns came as a reaction of a vigorous people against an effeminizing influence spreading from the court.

To satisfy the demand for gorgeous dress, the looms of Japan began weaving the wonderful fabrics for which the country became famous. Social fortunes turned on successful costumes and the men of the court began to powder and paint their faces like women, while a grand lady of the time was judged by the quantity of her habiliments.

A reaction favored the growth of a military class, then in embryo, and the shoguns emerged in glittering raiment, but as fighters and vigorous men. They were the embodiment of the spirit of the Iron Chancellors, the War Lords, the Prime Ministers of the later days.

The title of Shogun, a first signified, as did the Roman term imperator, only a commander in chief, but with the rise of the Shoguns to power in the empire the title conveyed an authority of supreme ruler, a double role of civil and military sovereign, subject in theory to the Mikado, but supreme in fact.

Prince Keiki was the 15th in a line extending back for nearly 700 years when he ascended to power in 1866 at the age of 29. Within a few months after his accession he was confronted with the national convulsion, originated several years before with the object of obliterating the regency and reinstating the imperial house to its rightful position. But for Tokugawa's enlightened conviction that at the time had come for putting an end to the onerous dual system of authority, and his readiness to sacrifice a despotic power, the revolution could never have been consummated with so little bloodshed.

After the restoration he kept altogether aloof from politics and spent his time in shooting and manly sports.

He Took the Drink.

Archibald Forbes was fond of recounting his experience in Leven, Fifeshire, Scotland, during a lecture tour. When Forbes entered the hall there was not a single soul present. After a bit, however, a man strolled in and calmly proceeded to choose a seat. It seems he was a commercial traveler, putting up at the place for the night, who had found time hanging heavily on his hands. Nobody else coming, Forbes said to the "audience":

"Will you have the lecture, or will you have a drink?"

"A drink," said the traveler.

BODY SNATCHERS.

Fate of Hare, the Last of His Odious Tribe in London.

The skeleton of the last of the body snatchers treasured in King's college hospital recalls that there must be Londoners still living who remember Hare, who, with his accomplice, Burke, first substituted murder for resurrecting corpses in order to supply subjects for the dissecting rooms. Burke, whose method of smothering the victims gave his name as a new verb to the language, was hanged on the testimony of his accomplice, for Hare turned queen's evidence and was released.

Forty years or so ago Hare was a well known figure in London streets, for Sergeant Ballantine in his "Life" describes him as one of the most persistent blind beggars on the streets about 1870. Few people recognized the cold blooded murderer in the middle aged stout man, clad in a white smock and led about by a dog. His blindness he owed to the fact that on leaving prison Hare found work in some lime kilns. The laborers discovered his history and threw him into a pit of lime. It was a terrible vengeance, for it destroyed his eyesight. And as it is not fifty years since he was a striking figure in London streets some people should recall him.—London Spectator.

Lightning Cures.

Some have had physical reasons to rejoice that they had been struck by lightning. De Quatrefages mentions the case of a telegraph employee at Strassburg who was struck senseless and remained paralyzed until the next day, but thereafter enjoyed better health than ever before. In Martinique a M. Roalde was deprived by lightning of the use of his limbs for three hours, but, having previously been a man of weak health, was much stronger from that time on. Several authors refer to cases in which rheumatism was cured by lightning. And in this respect also trees seem to be as men. Arago saw a poplar, one of an avenue of 1,500 near Tours, which, having been struck, developed such vigor that its trunk soon far surpassed in dimensions those of all its neighbors.

TIPPING THE WAITER.

Come to Think of It, It Does Win One a Lot of Special Favors.

A New York hotel manager is reported as saying that "a tip is nothing else than a reward for special consideration. The question will never be solved as long as any man who asks for special service is in the habit of giving a reward for it."

An eminently sane proposition, says the New York Evening Post. See, for instance, what special service and special consideration the citizen of New York obtains by tipping the waiter. When the customer sits down the waiter refrains from whisking the chair out from under the customer and letting him fall to the floor, as the waiter might very easily do. When he brings in the soup he brings it in a plate instead of a bottle. Who would grudge a small tip for being spared the humiliation of pouring soup out of a bottle? And in so many other ways, which the reader can enumerate for himself, the waiter puts himself out to make the diner comfortable. He refrains from sprinkling sugar over the roast beef and putting olive oil into the ice cream. Between courses he does not sit down to his own meal. If the diner happens to be in the company of a lady the waiter will abstain from disparaging remarks about her complexion. As for the cotroom boy, what is to prevent him from playing football with your hat, except the special consideration due a distributor of tips?

Queer Prisoners.

In the seventies of the last century life in Montenegro was not complex. A traveler relates: "At that time the adult male population was away fighting, and at times there was no one to spare to guard the inmates of the prison when out for exercise. One of them would then be given the rifle and take over the duty. Prisoners also were sent with messages. One went down to Cattaro, in Austrian territory, with 3,000 florins for the banker there, and faithfully delivered the money and was back in prison at night. Another Montenegrin begged a Russian in Cattaro to intercede for his release from prison. "But you are not in prison," said the Russian. "Oh, yes, I am. I have only come here for a load of skins and must go back."

Writing Music.

There is reason to regard the Hindus and the Chinese as in possession of some form of musical notation. The Greeks had a system of writing music, but its comprehension evades us. The Latin notation was, like that of the Greeks in this one particular, alphabetic. A generally accepted tradition credits St. Gregory with the reduction of the scale to the octave and the naming of the seven notes, a service which has commonly won for him the credit of the invention of the art of writing music.—New York Sun.

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman; In the Great South Seas.

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Copyright, 1912, by Cyrus Townsend Brady

It was my first design to have gone as master of her myself, and my lady would fain have had it so, but after reflection I decided it were better to have a much older man than I to command so long as she went as a passenger, and so I engaged a worthy seaman, one Samuel Matthews, old enough to be my father, with whom I had often sailed; in fact, the man under whom I made my first cruise. I did engage myself as mate, however, and I even tried in vain to induce Master Picklin and his sister to go with us.

It seemed proper in venturing among islands filled according to common report with savage peoples to provide for fighting. Therefore, after consulting with Captain Matthews, whom I fully acquainted with the entire project in all its details, I shipped a crew of thirty men and I provided in the equipment plenty of muskets, pistols and cutlasses, with the necessary powder and ball, and in addition a small brass cannon which I mounted on the fore-castle. Nor did our cargo lack means for friendly trading and barter should such be found practicable.

Naturally the unusualness of these preparations attracted attention, and Captain Matthews and I were overwhelmed with applications from adventurous men who desired to make the voyage, surmising that it was after treasure of some sort.

I left the work of engaging the crew to Captain Matthews. He had as boatswain a seaman named Pimball, in whom he placed great confidence. He was a villainous looking man with a white scar running from his left eye across his cheek, caused by a cut he had received in some fight, and the line of white showing against the stood a moment, hesitating, wondering whether after all I had the right or the privilege to break in upon such company as she might be entertaining, when a scream which came faintly from the end of the garden decided me.

I broke into a run and in a few moments came upon my lady struggling in the arms of a man. What man, you ask? The Duke of Arcester! He had his arms around her, and although he was no great shakes of a man, he was much stronger than the slight girl he was grappling with. He held her tightly by the waist with one hand and with the other was trying to turn her head so that he could kiss her.

I was upon them before they realized my arrival. I grasped the duke by the collar of his coat with my left hand and with my right I fairly tore him away from my lady.

"Thank God, you have come!" she cried, reeling and staggering, her face flushed, her hair disheveled, her dress in disarray.

I heard that much and then the duke was upon me. Gritting his teeth and swearing frightful oaths he got to his feet—I had thrown him prone—dragged out his sword and rushed at me.

"You dog!" he cried. "You have balked me before and you interfere now. I have had enough of you and the world has."

He did not intend to give me any chance to defend myself apparently. My little mistress screamed. I heard her call my name and I suppose she thought I was done for, but sailors are proverbially quick witted, footed and handed, and I was not the least alert of seamen. I was wearing a hanger, a heavier weapon than the duke's dress sword, but its weight was

He struggled and shrieked horribly as I did so, and my lady screamed as well, but I held him close until I finished.

"Now," said I to Mistress Lucy, "before I release him, one more question. Did—he kiss you?"

"No," answered Mistress Lucy faintly.

"Good!" I continued grimly. "Had he done so I would have marked the other cheek."

He was a handsome man, but those two scars roughly crisscrossed would never be eradicated, for I had cut deep with deliberate purpose. After that I released him, and he staggered away spitting blood, his cheek bleeding, a horrible looking object.

"That will be a lesson to your grace," said I, "not to insult an honest woman. I have no doubt there are many who would rejoice to see you now."

"I will have the law on you. I will have your life," he spluttered out.

"You can have anything you want," said I recklessly. "I am your master with the sword and with everything else. Now go?"

He turned and staggered away and that was the last I saw of him. I heard later that he had the devil's own time explaining those marks. He proclaimed that they had been inflicted by a madman, which was nearly the truth, but in some way the story leaked out, and I should judge that my vengeance for the insult to my lady was as adequate as anything could be.

"I am come to take you to the ship," I said to her. "We must get there tonight to sail with the beginning of the ebb tomorrow morning."

"I am ready," she said, putting her hand upon my arm.

We went into the house and from there to the coach, with her maid and her baggage, after making her farewell to her kind hostess. In the evening we got aboard the ship, where I saw her safely bestowed in the compartment waiting the boatswain's shrill which had noted it all. I can see their smiling, laughing faces even now.

As it was, I drew myself up waited while she sent for good Captain Matthews and, vouchsafing explanations, imperiously bade stow me below as a prisoner in cabin. He didn't relish the job went about it forthwith. Indeed did not wait for further orders her look and glance. I stalked it as haughtily as you please. It was ship, as she had said and as she truly believed, and had it not who could deny her anything? Forsooth, I could steal a kiss, but balk her will. And here I was mate of the Rose of Devon, and for my own remuneration I had her captain, engaged in this goose chase, this foolish search treasure, for so it seemed to me locked up below like any mutiny dog at the behest of a woman! It could have broken between my thumb and finger. And after all I had and sacrificed for her too.

Come to think of it, I had loved her, ever since those days. I, the gardener's boy, had been faithful and devoted slave, through the long years when I been far voyaging in distant seas kept her memory fresh and sweet true. Although I had been in rough places I had seen life from seamy side, and the common lot sailor of my day had been mine.

There are no better seamen in row seas or broad than I. I had led my way up through the fore-castle to the quarterdeck. I had a gift for figures. I could take a sigh work out a position as well as book taught navigator, and I had a great reader too. My private was ever crowded with books. Of my earnings were spent that I had wit enough to choose good but too, and perseverance enough to them well.

I knew more than she—oh, more!—about everything but the ways of good society, and I had at least learned something of good manners in her company since her father's death. My shipmates used to laugh me for being a book deliver—a v they were wont to call it. Well, didn't laugh very long. There nothing physical for which I stand aside for any man. I was six feet high and built in proportion, unaided and alone, held wheel of the best ship in the fleet storm.

CHAPTER VI.

Wherein My Lady Is Placed In Peril.

NOW I was a prisoner. I didn't feel that blow or cheek, but as I thought it fairly scared me. I I her. I hoped that—no, I might as be honest with myself. I didn't how she treated me, how disdained were her words, how unjustly she shamed me, I loved her. I couldn't I didn't want to help it. I would the deck plank she hallowed with footsteps.

There was another side to my dilemma, and I presently took the on that. I swear that I was not t ing of myself, but of her. I was thinking of her. I could see danger beset her as perhaps no one else and my confinement added to her. She didn't realize that; nobody a

I left the work of engaging the crew to Captain Matthews. He had as boatswain a seaman named Pimball, in whom he placed great confidence. He was a villainous looking man with a white scar running from his left eye across his cheek, caused by a cut he had received in some fight, and the line of white showing against the bronzed, weather beaten cheek he sported did not improve his appearance. But that he was a prime seaman was evident. Captain Matthews seemed to have great confidence in him.

To anticipate, when we boarded the ship I liked the crew not much better than the boatswain. I will say this for them, however, that a smarter, quicker set of seamen never hauled on brace or laid on yardarm. It was not their skill or strength or courage that I did not like, but they were not the kind of men I would have sought for a ship of my own, and the presence of my lady and her maid, a worthy woman, a long time servant at the castle, who had elected to follow her fortunes, made me timid, yet I was not unusually apprehensive. I had a sublime confidence in my own ability to deal with any man or any group of men.

I did not stint the outfitting of the ship, and when I finished, having left nothing out that either my own or Captain Matthews' experience or imagination would suggest, there was left of our joint funds enough to pay the wages of the officers and of the men out and back and no more—that is, allowing a year for the round voyage. The lines of the Rose of Devon were unusually good. She had a reputation for being a speedy boat, and that was more time than enough. It was my purpose to go around the world with her rather than retrace our course about Cape Horn after we reached the island, if we ever reached it, so we staked everything we had on the future. If my lady had had the least knowledge of the value of ships she would have seen how little way her £2,000 had gone, but she was as guileless as any other woman on that subject, and Master Ficklin was not much better. I lied to them both with a good grace and with an easy conscience. It was for her sake.

CHAPTER V.

Wherein the Duke Is Marked In Farewell.

BUT one thing strikes me as worthy to be chronicled before we embarked. When all was ready and everything aboard, I went back to Master Ficklin's in Tanstock, which was an easy day's journey from Plymouth sound, where the Rose of Devon lay, to fetch my lady and her maid. Master Ficklin's house was a somewhat large one and was surrounded by a walled garden, perhaps two acres in extent, which ran back from the house to a little brook which bounded the village.

Master Ficklin was at his office, although it was yet early in the morning when I called, intending to fetch my lady to Plymouth by coach, a special coach which I had engaged, by the way. His sister said that Mistress Wilperforce was in the garden and that she had company. She offered to show me to her presence, but I said I knew the way and could go there myself. I did not like the word company overmuch since her fine friends had more or less forgotten her.

I passed through the hall, out of the back door and into the garden. I

He did not intend to give me any chance to defend myself apparently. My little mistress screamed. I heard her call my name and I suppose she thought I was done for, but sailors are proverbially quick witted, footed and handed, and I was not the least alert of seamen. I was wearing a hanger, a heavier weapon than the duke's dress sword, but its weight was a matter of no moment to an arm like mine. I stepped aside as he lunged at me, drew it, and the next moment our blades clashed in earnest.

Now, I am a good fighter and no mean fencer. I can cross blades with any one on earth. My swift play must have looked to the duke as if I were surrounded by a wall of steel. Therefore he realized at once that his only chance lay in the energy and rapidity of his fence. Lunge succeeded lunge with lightning-like speed. I will admit that I was hard put to it for a time. It was with the greatest difficulty that I parried, but my lord was not built for the continuance of such violent exercise. Sweat came into his eyes, his thrusts grew less swift, if not less vicious, in their intent. After a few moments I saw that I had him. It was now my turn to attack. Something of the fury of my Saxon ancestors suddenly filled my veins. I beat down his defense by a series of terrific blows and finally shivered his sword. He stood before me panting, weaponless, yet, to give him his due, more or less undaunted. I raised my own blade.

"Would you strike a defenseless man?" he cried haughtily, still not blanching.

"You had no scruple in attacking a defenseless woman," I replied. "Nay," I thundered as he made a sudden motion, "stand where you are. What I shall do to you depends upon what I hear. If you move I swear to you that I will beat you down like the dog that you are."

I was amazed afterward at my temerity in thus addressing a duke, but you will understand my feelings. Without taking my eyes off of him I next addressed myself to my lady.

"Will you tell me now, Mistress Lucy," said I softly, "what this man purposed or said? I can see what he tried to do, but what was his meaning and intent?"

"He—he—wanted—me to go with him," faltered my lady.

"He renewed his offer of marriage?" I asked, with a sudden sinking of heart.

"No," whispered the girl.

"My God!" I cried. "Did you dare to?"

"Why should I marry a penniless baggage?" he sneered.

"I shall insure that you will remember," I said quietly, although I was blazing inside, "all the days of your life what you tried to do—the insult that you put upon this lady."

"Would you kill me?" he cried, as I stepped nearer to him.

"No," said I, "that would be too quick and easy an end to your punishment. I will put my mark upon you, her brand as a coward. Everybody who sees you will ask you about it, and you can explain it as you will. Two persons at least will know what the mark signifies, my lady and myself."

He stared at me absolutely uncomprehending, but before he could make a move I caught him around the breast, pinioned both his arms to his side and then I deliberately shortened my sword, holding it by the blade, and cut two long, deep gashes in his left cheek.

night to sail with the beginning of the ebb tomorrow morning."

"I am ready," she said, putting her hand upon my arm.

We went into the house and from there to the coach, with her maid and her baggage, after making her farewell to her kind hostess. In the evening we got aboard the ship, where I saw her safely bestowed in the comfortable cabin I had arranged for her and for her woman. When day broke and she came on deck we were under way for the Island of the Stairs. The great adventure had begun.

I pass over the events of the next six months, but not because they were uninteresting. Oh, no. One could not sail from Plymouth, England, to the south seas, touching at Madeira, the Canaries, Rio and Buenos Aires and rounding the mighty and fearsome Cape Horn, without seeing many things of interest and participating in scenes as dangerous as they were exciting. But I am not writing a book of travels.

We were drawing near to the island we sought, according to the calculations of good Captain Matthews and myself, when something happened.

I had brought it on myself I realized, but that made it no more bearable. Indeed, I was mad, mad all through; outraged in dignity, humiliated in self respect, and were it not foolish to speak so of a man of my years and sturdiness I should say I was broken in heart.

My mistress had been so kind to me that I had dwelt in a fool's paradise. I awoke to realize that she had not forgotten the difference between our stations. I had forgotten it in these long months at sea. By heavens, the sight of her was enough to make a man forget anything if he loved her as I!

There! The secret is out, but I make no doubt you guessed it long before. But she had not. There was no mirror in the cabin, but I could well guess that the sight of me was not sufficiently prepossessing to make any woman forget. Yet she had been so kind. I was her only confidant or companion in the ship. I had forgotten. I had endeavored to leap the gap. I had fondly hoped that the one thing in me that was truly great—my passion for her—would land me safely by her side.

I did not see how she could fail to comprehend it, though I did try to disguise it.

Well, that love of mine, it had not brought her nearer. On the contrary, it had put me under lock and key. And here I was, shut up like a criminal in my own cabin in her ship, or mine, for that matter. Come to think of it, that moment I believe love had completely disappeared. I could recall—and can to this day, for that matter—the fierce, burning rush of color to her cheek where I had kissed it; the fire of rage and surprise mingled which sparkled in her eyes. The Duke of Arcester I had marked for life for less than this, I recalled in shame. I hardly recollected the fierce blow of her hand upon my face. That was nothing. But I was undone. All the patient devotion of years, all the restraint of the long voyage, had come to naught.

There was plenty of bright starlight on deck. She had stepped out from the dark shadow of the spencer, and I had followed on her heels. The first night watch had not yet been called, and the men, idled about the decks the deck plank she hallowed with footsteps.

There was another side to my refinement, and I presently took it on that. I swear that I was not thinking of myself, but of her. I was thinking of her. I could see danger beset her as perhaps no one else and my confinement added to her. She didn't realize that; nobody, the ship realized it. There was: imminent, menacing, about to be feared.

You see, the fact that we treasure hunting had got about, not thought much of, the crew, the villainous looking boat Pimball. We had shipped a smart seamen, about the average quality and above the average smartness, I decided as the day passed with nothing happening. Pimball had signed some I could have been left ashore.

Her presence on the ship, to a mystery. Alone in the little of Devon with thirty men. Mishap the maid she had brought her had died after a brief illness weeks out. Captain Matthews were for turning back, but she she would go on. We had so much time already and her a embarked. We were now plowing blue waters of the Pacific, and I of the ship and the only other to be trusted, locked up!

We were nearing the latitude longitude of the island. Supper men rose in mutiny! I grow teeth in rage. The men liked enough, and I had been patient keep them in good humor, passing many a thing for her sake that I have followed with a blow had been there. Captain Matthew complained once or twice of it, but I knew things that he and I had done what I deemed for her. I pledge you my word I didn't care a farthing for the ure. I had never given it thought. I grew to believe in and less as we got further from and if I had been stronger for m and weaker in my love I would dissuaded her from the voyage, ing Master Ficklin's lead.

Now, that she was poor and neglected and forgotten, I had a foolish dream that I could be companion to her—a life shipmate the captain was a rough, plain or. What a fool I was! And had worked in some way as I I tended. We had been throw closer intimacy by the loneliness position and my faithful and, no night, most unobtrusive, self devotion.

I suppose it never entered her that I could presume to love her. I was less careful than I had been otherwise, and that night when I had poured out my ration to her she had had no with which to meet it. I thought silence was consent. I see now it was amazement. I seized her arms like the brute she must thought me, lifted her up and her fair on the lips and then averted cheek. Arcester, the guard, could have done no wo will never forget how she stigm me—"brute, coward, low born." I believe she had railed at that drol duke so fiercely.

I listened. I thought I heard a foot- fall in the outer cabin. Could she be there? I suppose that I had been lock- ed up for perhaps an hour. Aye, on the instant the bell forward struck three. We kept man-of-war customs at her fancy. The sound came to me faintly as I listened. Half past 9. She could not have gone to her berth yet. She must be there in the great cabin. I ventured to call.
What it cost me any man can imag- ine—and to humble myself to ask her mercy too. I am a man of fierce tem- per, as you have deemed, but I can control it on occasion, and I did it now. I shook the door of the cabin gently at first and then vigorously and called once and again. There was no answer. I beat upon it. I raised my voice. I scarcely thought I could be heard on deck. The wind was blowing, the sea was heavy, and the ship was pitching wildly. The strain- ing, the creaking, the groaning of the timbers would have prevented such a noise as I made from attracting atten- tion unless some one were in the cabin.
But all in vain. No heed was paid to me, and yet I could swear that somebody was there. I don't know how exactly, but I was conscious of her presence. Perhaps because I was so in love with her that I could al- ways tell whether she was about. I cau to this day.

The words came to me through the partition. She was there, then, as I had divined. She had been there all the time, trying me.

"I would fain have a word with you," I answered, putting everything else by and speaking most entreating-ly and with a humility I did not alto-gether feel.

"I desire no speech with you," was her cold and measured answer.

I could hear her turn as if to move away.

"Think of my long and faithful serv-ice," I urged, "and of your gracious friendship for me, often expressed."

"You yourself forgot it tonight."

"For God's sake," I cried desperately as I heard her go, "just one word."

"An apology? Do you beg forgive-ness?"

"No—yes—anything!" I finished in confusion.

"I will not listen. I wish to con-vince you of the enormity of what you have done, the grossness of your presumption. I will give you time for quiet reflection, sir."

"I am convinced already," I urged hurriedly.

"So easily?" she mocked.

"Madam, if you love life and honor I pray you hear me. It is not of my-self I think, but of you. You are in grave peril," returned I with the ut-most seriousness.

"What peril?"

There was a note of alarm in her voice in spite of her effort to be indiffer-ent. I seized upon its promise eagerly.

"The men of the ship—they are not what they should be. Captain Mat-thews is alone. Pinball is a villain. I trust no one but"—

"And is this the plea on which you seek enlargement?"

"That is the only plea."

"You did not discover this danger until I locked you up, did you?"

"I tell you that it is not for myself I fear, but for you," I persisted.

"And was it for that you insulted me on the quarterdeck before the men? I will hear no more. It is a foolish plea. The men are devoted to me and"—

"For God's sake, Mistress Lucy," I cried, but this time she was gone.

I heard the door of her cabin shut violently. There was no help for it. Well, I must devise some way unaided, for I must get out for her sake. The cabin was lighted by an air port closed by a deadeye. I measured it, drew back the thick glass and examined the opening, although I knew it was a fu-tile proposition. A slender boy might have slipped through, but not a man such as I. My mighty thews and sinews and great bulk required a door, and no small one either.

The wind had ceased blowing hard outside, and some spray came in through the port as the waves slapped the side of the ship. I closed and se-cured it. There was nothing to be gain-ed there. I must seek some other way.

I was not weaponless. Nobody had thought to search the cabin, and a brace of pistols which I always kept loaded and ready for an emergency were locked securely in my chest.

Farm and Garden

FOR PERMANENT PASTURE.

Important to Obtain Combination of Grasses With Long Season.

Providing permanent pasture is one of the matters that furnish much material for thought on the part of the farmer.

It is not possible to give any set rules as to what kinds or different sorts of grass should be sown for a permanent pasture. Certain combinations of grass furnish better pasture than others, but the conditions may be such that a good catch is impossible. A combination that will furnish pasturage during a long period is desirable.

Under ordinary conditions a combination of red clover, alfalfa, timothy, orchard grass, meadow fescue and tall meadow oat grass will form a pasture that is good for all summer usage. It may be, however, that some of these grasses will not do well under the local conditions and must be omitted in favor of others.

How much seed to use is a matter that must be fully considered. Some say put on plenty of seed, which is a very good rule to go by, but it is a needless expense to use more than is necessary. The proper amount to use will depend to some extent upon the kind of soil.

THE USE OF WINDBREAKS.

They Afford Protection at All Seasons in Certain Localities.

The windbreak has had little attention in the southwest for the reason that it has been little used, and, in fact, no great demand has been felt for it. But there are many sections of the plains country and the northern Panhandle in Oklahoma and Texas where windbreaks would afford considerable protection to trees.

Briefly stated, windbreaks afford protection in three ways—winter protection, summer protection, protection during harvesting time with such fruits as apples. Where there are heavy winter winds the windbreak protects the soil by retaining leaves and other vegetation so the snow will form a cover. It reduces winter killing of buds in such tender fruits as peaches, cherries, etc. In summer the windbreak may save the trees when heavily loaded with fruit; it reduces evaporation in some instances; keeps sand from blowing where the soil is very sandy. It may prevent fruits from being blown from the trees in harvest time.

The trees suitable for a windbreak will depend upon the locality, the purpose for which the break is used and the soil. Some of the trees commonly used are poplars, willows, privet, cottonwood, bois d'arc, pine, etc.

Bees.

In cold climates the bees are now in a state of repose, and it is little short of criminal to disturb them, as it will only do them more harm than good.

All progressive bee men know that where the bees were properly prepared for winter there need be no concern for them now. And even though the snow may cover the apiary completely no harm need be feared, as the snow adds to their warmth.

Late in the fall, after the close of the honey flow, bees cluster in a compact mass for the winter, usually at the central combs, and so remain until settled weather in the spring or until brood rearing is well established.

If the beekeeper tries to winter bees on the summer stands in any form of a hive other than a chaff or double walled hive, he will probably lose more in the value of bees than the extra expense he would incur in making chaff hives of some kind.

THE END OF THE HARVEST.

The harvest of harvests is within the mind of the man who, viewing his crops and flocks garnered and sheltered against the winter's needs, sees a just return for his labors. Whether the year has been full or lean, whether or not the promise of seed has been fulfilled by the bounty of the reaping, the end of the harvest brings its own reward. If he has realized contentment in moderation he comes to the end of the year without regret.

Let the countryman be thankful that his work is a life, not merely a craft or form of toil. It is a vital, throbbing existence in the midst of a world of living things. It is a God made vocation.—Country Gentleman.

RODENT PROOF CORNCRIBS.

Old Fashioned Sort Give Way to Steel Structures.

Every farmer knows that corn stored in the ordinary crib is exposed to more or less damage from rats, mice, birds and chickens, and he makes allowance for this loss. The extent of the damage from these sources depends upon the kind of crib used and the length of time the corn is in storage. In the old fashioned rail crib, which is now virtually out of date in the older states, the loss was very great.

During the last few years the steel crib has come into use as a rodent proof structure. There are several makes and styles of these cribs upon the market, but the principle involved in each is the same. A description of two steel cribs in use on the Ohio State university farm may be of interest to farmers who are unfamiliar with this method of storing corn. They are made of perforated galvanized steel, circular in form, and stand on concrete foundations. The perforations admit air, and further ventilation is provided by a perforated steel tube extending up through the center of the crib and out the top. The roof is of steel. These cribs have a capacity of 500 bushels each. They cost $150 apiece, not including the foundation and the cost of erecting.

In laying the foundation for the steel crib the excavation is made, and a foot or so of cinders is put down. On top of this several inches of cement are laid, then a layer of steel sheets and finally another coat of cement. The steel sheets prevent the moisture from rising from the soil. The floor is raised slightly in the center, so that if water should gain entrance it would immediately run out of the crib.

These cribs have been in use over three years and have proved entirely satisfactory. They are absolutely rat, mouse, bird and chicken proof and, with the aid of a good padlock, are thief proof. Weights were kept of corn stored in them for over a year, and the only loss was due to evaporation of moisture. The steel crib then appears to be the safest place for the farm storage of corn.—Country Gentleman.

There is a distinct public demand for the meat of lightweight hogs from 200 to 300 pounds. The profitable pork is that grown in ten months, or from April cember, so that there is little feeding, and most of the growth obtained from field forage.

Perhaps as good a plan as at market twenty out of twenty-five late in the fall and carry over-maturing five until they are six eighteen months old. The back ket calls for the larger animals. Prices are apt to be higher in the winter months than in the fall.

All the breeds of hogs have advocates. For general purposes it is better than to use dams of White, Tamworth or Duroc crossed with males of the China or Berkshire variety. The of breeding will give large little good sized animals.

FARMERS' INTEREST RATES.

Why Farmers Pay More For Money Than Other Men.

To Farm and Fireside Judson C. Welliver contributes an article showing how farmers have to pay high rates of interest in this country because they have no system of collective credits such as they have for the benefit of farmers in certain foreign countries. The substitution of community credit for individual credit is what always reduces rates of interest. Cities borrow their money at lower rates of interest than individuals because they act as a community. Following is an extract from Mr. Welliver's article showing the rates of interest farmers pay in this country at the present time:

"Recently the department of agriculture investigated interest rates paid by farmers all over the country. It was found, through statements made by several thousand banks in answer to questions, that on all loans to farmers, secured and unsecured, the average rates run from a trifle under 6 per cent in most of New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, up to 10.57 per cent in Oklahoma, 10.57 in New Mexico, 10.15 in Arizona, 10.13 in Montana, 10.70 in North Dakota, 9.97 in Texas, 9.48 in South Dakota, 9.98 in Georgia, 8.80 in Florida, 6.23 in Ohio, 6.47 in Indiana, 6.31 in Illinois, 6.88 in Michigan, 6.24 in Wisconsin, 7.93 in Minnesota, 7.21 in Iowa, 7.28 in Missouri, 6.86 in Kentucky, 8.28 in Tennessee, 8.26 in Mississippi, 8.33 in Louisiana, 9.67 in Arkansas, 9.37 in Wyoming, 9.24 in Colorado, 8.61 in Utah, 9.03 in Nevada, 9.92 in Idaho, 8.99 in Washington, 8.32 in Oregon and 7.44 in California."

It is a rapid grower, makes good of food supplied and can be kept for market at any time, either sucker, porker or baconer. The are rather small, however, and for reason, as well as to get a more animal for general purposes, they are disposed to cross the breeds.

The selection of the male is of importance, as he directly influences every pig one may have to fatten it depends on his breeding very largely whether or not the pigs can profitably use of the food given. As in the case of all sires, they should be pure bred, of approved strain, both with regard to capacity on flesh rapidly and to last the sow in the production of large litters.

The dam need not necessarily be pure bred, provided she is of a type. She should be selected if prolific mother, as fecundity is hereditary. The teats should number at least twelve, fully developed, separate, even in size, and the front well forward on the body. The number of teats does not indicate the number of pigs she is likely to have. Sometimes sows with eleven teats will have large litters.

Whether on range or in pen, should have a medicinal ration up as follows: One pound each of wood charcoal, sulphur, salt, soda and sulphide of antimony, verize and mix thoroughly. Use a tablespoonful daily for each pig the time they are old enough to enter the field. Add a tablespoonful of meal for each animal and mix whole lot with enough moistened bran to make a palatable ration. Clean water and shade are essential. Dipping also is advisable. In case sickness keep those affected from the sound ones and take precautions to prevent the spread of disease.

Whitewash.

The following formula for whitewash has been recommended by the United States department of agriculture:

Take half a bushel of unslaked slake it with boiling water and during the process to keep in strain the liquid through a fine or strainer and add to it a peck of previously dissolved in warm water three pounds of ground rice boiled thin paste and stirred in while half a pound of Spanish whiting one pound of clean glue previously dissolved by soaking in cold water and then hanging over a slow fire small pot hung in a larger one with water. Add five gallons of water to the mixture, stir well and let stand a few days covered from. It should be applied hot, for its purpose it can be kept in a kettle a portable furnace. Coloring may be added as desired. When less durable whitewash will answer the above may be modified by leaving out the whiting and glue.

Making the ittle Farm Pay

by C. C. BOWSFIELD

FOR quick money making, with small investment and easy work, no branch of farm industry surpassed pork raising. No feature can fit better into a little farm program, and no line of production is safer and more profitable on a large place.

Hogpens may be the most inexpensive kind, but must be kept clean. They need proof against drafts and storms. premises also are essential in ing against disease. Two or acres of rape and an acre of oles will provide practically all ider required by twenty-five pigs weaning till fattening time.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Story of a Little Girl Who Telephoned Santa Claus.

ON THE OTHER END OF WIRE.

How It Happened That the Good Kriss Kringle Answered Her Message.
Concerning Christmas Gifts.

There is a sad little story of a little girl who telephoned Santa Claus. She did not want any toys or dolls. She wanted the good saint to bring her mother to her on Christmas eve. Her mother was in heaven, and Santa Claus must have felt very sad that he could not grant the little girl's wish.

But the girl we are telling about was not the sad little girl, but a very glad

little girl. She told her mother that she was going to telephone to Santa Claus and tell him just what she wanted for Christmas. So when she picked up the receiver the next day it was connected with her papa's office. Over the phone she heard the hearty voice of Santa Claus, as she thought, and she told him what would please her for Christmas. And what do you suppose? It was not for herself at all that she asked. She wanted Santa Claus not to forget her friend Millie, whose parents were not so well off as her own. She asked Santa to give Millie a doll and a set of furs and a pair of skates. And, sure enough, Santa Claus gave Millie those things and a great deal more. And you may be sure that good old Santa didn't forget the little girl who telephoned. But she was more happy over Millie's good fortune than her own.

Time of Forgiveness.

They "hadn't spoke" for ever so long. As Gertrude said, "It was a pity, too, 'cause Charlotte and Isabelle used to be just too chummy for anything."

But no two girls can "stay mad" forever. It was most fitting, then, that Christmas should be the time when the two who were once so friendly became chums once more.

You see, both had recitations to make in the Christmas day exercises held before school "left out" for the holidays. Perhaps teacher knew exactly what she was about when she

TO BEAUTIFY THE HOME.

Wall Paper in Damask Designs Popular This Winter.

The interior walls of our houses are claiming the attention now of architects as well as decorators, and never were more interesting fabrics and papers assembled from which to select. The paneled room in wall paper is popular, sometimes making each wall into a panel with broad bands of roses. At other times two or three panels to a side with conventionalized borders are used. It is suited to a colonial room, and with the old colonial furniture nothing could be more appropriate and charming.

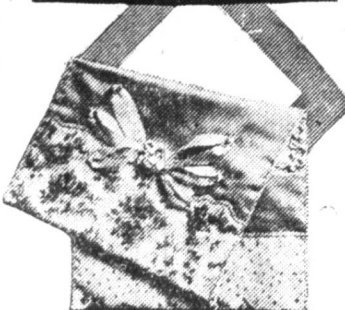

Wall papers in damask designs are popular. They suggest a pattern, but are carried out in one tone. The real damask is used also, very much coarser than our table damask, but it is made in many colors, which make possible many beautiful effects.

The curtain materials now at the best decorators show the beautiful old heavy colorings of the early centuries. Cotton tapestries are seen carrying out the early English needlework. Mercerized goods are in great demand, especially the damasks in solid colors. The new cretonnes displayed are wonderful, many being in Chinese designs. There are serges in colors and designs which make a beautiful curtain drapery.

HOMEMADE TRAY.

Good Looking Gifts Girls Can Make
For a Dollar.

When the picture sales are on one can get mighty good looking frames for a quarter or less. The only requirements are that the frames be rather wide and strong, with flat sides to permit of screwing on the little brass handles. These are the only really expensive part of the tray, cost-

The back consists of a piece of light wood—the side of an orange box does nicely—tacked on securely with brads to the edges of the frame and covered with dark felt or flannel to prevent scratching of the table. Any girl who can handle ordinary tools can make for a dollar a tray that will rival expensive ones in the shops.

"MY ONLY MEDICINE"

Says Mrs. Corbett, Are "Fruit-a-tives"
"They Keep Me In Perfect Health"

Mrs. ANNIE A. CORBETT

AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913

"I have used 'Fruit-a-tives' for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with 'Fruit-a-tives' and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking 'Fruit-a-tives' I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot". ANNIE A. CORBETT.

POINSETTIA TEA.

Just the Sort of Entertainment For Holiday Week.

A woman's civic club, a literary or musical society or any organization of a similar nature which wishes to entertain its friends at the holiday season or, perchance, desires to increase its funds will find that a "poinsettia tea" may be adapted to its needs, says the Woman's Home Companion.

Decorate all the rooms with wall bouquets or hanging baskets of poinsettia and ground pine. Transform one of the rooms into an attractive little tea room with small, round tables lighted with red shaded candles. Festoon each table with a dainty garland of the ground pine, placing here and there a single poinsettia blossom.

The menu cards may be decorated in water color with a scarlet poinsettia, and sandwiches may be served wrapped in paraffin paper tied with a tinsel cord and decorated with a bit of folly. Little cakes of various kinds with a frosting of red or white may be passed in graceful baskets, decked with the ground pine and the poinsettia. Tiny individual pies of mince and pumpkin would be appreciated with cups of cof-market at any time, either as a er, porker or baconer. The litters rather small, however, and for this on, as well as to get a more rangy al for general purposes, farmers lipped to cross the breeds.

A selection of the male is of great rtance, as he directly influences y pig one may have to fatten, and pends on his breeding very largely her or not the pigs can make table use of the food given them. n the case of all sires, the male ld be pure bred, of approved n, both with regard to capacity to n flesh rapidly and to influence ow in the production of large lit-

But no two girls can "stay mad" for- ever. It was most fitting, then, that Christmas should be the time when the two who were once so friendly became chums once more.

You see, both had recitations to make in the Christmas day exercises held before school "left out" for the holidays. Perhaps teacher knew exactly what she was about when she placed Charlotte and Isabelle right next each other in the assembling for the grand recitative.

Charlotte, you know, had to recite lines ending with "So now the Christ- mastide is here," while Isabelle con- tinued, "A time of forgiveness and peace."

Every one noticed that both girls were very uneasy whenever they re- heard their lines. So, after all, no one wondered greatly when Isabelle, the day before the entertainment was to be given walked straight toward Charlotte at recess with the words:

"Charlotte, I can't keep saying 'a time of forgiveness' every day and know that we haven't forgiven one another. Won't you be friends?"

You may imagine how delighted ev- ery one was when the two threw them- selves into each other's arms and told each other how glad they were.

Baked Ham.

Put the ham in a kettle and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and set back where it will just simmer for three hours or until almost tender. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil until tender. Let cool in same water it was cooked in and when al- most cold remove skin, sprinkle with sugar and bake in rather slow oven for an hour.

Candied Sweet Potatoes.

Wash well and boil with skins on. When cooked let cool and remove skins, cut in thin slices, round way of pota- toes. In your baking dish put a layer of sweet potatoes, sprinkle with sug- ar, cinnamon and small bits of butter, then another layer of potato, and so on until you have what you wish to use, then pour milk over all and bake in a slow oven.

Plum Pudding.

Mix one cupful of finely chopped su- with one cupful of molasses, three wel- beaten eggs, one cupful of sweet milk, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of baking soda, one cupful of chopped citron peel, ha a cupful of chopped nut meats, two cupfuls of seeded raisins, one cupful of currants, one teaspoonful each of powdered cin- namon and ginger, half a teaspoonful each of powdered allspice, nutmeg and mace, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and four cupfuls of sifted flour. Pour into a well greased mold, cover with buttered paper and steam for four hours. Turn out and serve with hard sauce.

Court and Witness Agree.

An amusing incident occurred in one of the New York courts the other day. The lawyer for the defense was making a very lengthy cross examina- tion of an old lady when he was interrupted by the judge with the remark, "I think you have exhausted this witness."

"Yes, judge," she exclaimed, "I do feel very much exhausted."

Illustrated are two presents which come within the dollar margin. One is a handkerchief case of silk and handsome cretonne, and the other de- sign, carried out in like fabrics, is a sachet pad for milady's bureau drawer.

Your Dog In Cold Weather.

Now that cold nights are here do not neglect your dog if he sleeps in a ken- nel in your yard. During the summer he has slept where he pleased—prob- ably on the rug on your front porch, as he is likely to have been the first visitor each morning when the front door has been opened. If he has a kennel care should be taken now and kept up during the winter to have it dry and as comfortable as possible. To do this supply it with clean straw or shavings and change the bedding daily. Kennels should not rest on the ground, but should be raised on bricks or blocks of wood, so they will not be- come damp. Don't place them where there is a draft. Let them face toward the south, so that the sun may shine in. Dogs are not so likely then to suffer from dry cold and from dampness and drafts, and in the country, where a large proportion are watchdogs, it is only fair to reward them by giving them good care.

Transformed Griddlecakes.

The wheat griddlecake that is so often seen on the American breakfast table can be transformed in several ways that lend variety and turn a humble breakfast pancake into a festive dish.

Sometimes the juice of an orange is added to a plain wheaten batter, and then, again, a quantity of candied or- ange rind cut into fine shreds is also stirred in. A famous cook serves these "orange pancakes" for the breakfast. Grated coconut is sometimes added. Honey—about a tablespoonful—and a few gratings of nutmeg make still an- other variety. They are stirred into the wheaten batter before cooking. Raisins, figs, prunes or dates chopped in coarse chunks may be used in the same way. About a tablespoonful of any one of these fruits is used to every cupful of batter.

"What has become of the orator who used to make such thrilling speeches?" "He had to quit," replied Farmer Cornloss. "He took on so much weight that he couldn't get up on a soap box without smashin' it in."—Washington Star.

The menu cards may be decorated in water color with a scarlet poinsettia, and sandwiches may be served wrapped in paraffin paper tied with a tinsel cord and decorated with a bit of holly. Little cakes of various kinds with a frosting of red or white may be passed in graceful baskets, decked with the ground pine and the poinsettia. Tiny individual pies of mince and pumpkin would be appreciated with cups of coffee. Hot spiced grape juice and thin wafers might be served at these tables, as well as from the great china bowl standing at the other end of the room upon a small table under a big poin- settia bell.

ECONOMY TALK.

Know the Kind of Coal You Are Using and Be Safe.

Coal is one of the most variable of products. Unfortunately there is as yet no trademarked brand for the con- sumer to rely on so he may know what he is getting. If a package of a trade- marked gelatin is worthless you can get your money back from the dealer. But if you buy a ton of poor coal you will only have to wait until it is all burned out. There are as many kinds of coal as there are places where it is burned, so many confusing names have entered in, and what is "pea coal" in one locality is not sure to be the same elsewhere. First find out what coal, size and amount, etc., your par- ticular boiler or furnace requires. Then buy that kind of the most reputable dealer. It may be stove coal, pea coal, nut, etc., but first find out what the manufacturer of your furnace or stove says would be the best to use with his make of stove before you buy the fuel.

Rev. Martin J. Bates Dead.

Another of the prominent men in the Methodist ministry in this district passed away on Friday last. Rev. M. J. Bates who has been a resident of Napanee for some years and who purchased a home here but a few weeks ago, died in the Mowat Memorial Hospital, Kingston. He retired from the ministry on account of ill health and was superannuated about four years ago. The reverend gentleman had served at Adolphustown, Yarker and Tamworth. He had been at Bath up until three years ago when he moved to Napanee. Thirteen years of his life was spent as a conference evangelist, his work assuch extending over more than one conference and into California. The remains were taken to Montreal for cremation and the ashes will be placed in the family plot at Catarqui cemetery. The funeral service was conducted on Saturday afternoon, Rev. S. Sellery, of Trinity Church, officiating, assisted by Rev. J. P. Wilson, chairman of Bay Quinte conference, and Rev. John Webster, of Brock street Methodist church, Kingston. The deceased is survived by his widow.

Retail Merchants Meet.

The Retail Merchants met on Wednesday night in the Council Chamber when addresses were given by Mr. N. C. Cameron, of Peterborough, Provincial Treasurer of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, who gave an outline of the work of the Association. Among the subjects touched on were:

The proposed Workmen's Compensation Act.

The Bulk Sales Bill.

The inspection of Weights and Measures.

The proposed Fire Marshal Bill

To make false advertising a criminal offence.

The Business Assessment Act (freight cartage charges) as well as many other matters affecting the Retail Trade.

The Credit Reportings Department was fully explained by Mr. E. Marlow, of Toronto, which is for the mutual protection of all the members of the association throughout Canada. The system is that all members are requested to forward to the Head Office a list of the names of all those who purchased goods and who will not pay when requested to do so. These names will be placed in the Delinquent Debtors Book, or in other words the black list, which will go into the hands of every member of the association and will remain there until such times as they pay up. After a full discussion it was decided to form a local branch of the Association here and the following officers were elected:

President—S. C. Denison.
1st Vice-Pres.—A. E. Paul.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. A. Chinneck.
Secretary—Mark Graham.
Treasurer—E. I. Boyle.

The old Motto Renewed for the New Year.

The Yorkshire Nightingale—A Preacher of Exceptional Merit.

Mr. Bacon was early called to preach and coupled with his sweet singing his preaching drew vast crowds wherever he went. His sermons are able and original, expositions of Bible truth which he illustrates by his own songs. These "Song-Sermons" on Sunday produce a lasting impression on the great audiences that attend the services, while they beget a desire to hear his week-night Entertainments of Song and Recital and Humorous and Musical Monologues that cannot be equalled to-day by any living artist. Hear him in Trinity Church on Sunday.

For lice on cattle and poultry use our "Lice Kill Powder," 25 cents per lb. It is perfectly harmless and guaranteed to do the work. At the Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

Remember

We sell the best coal mined. Screen all coal before delivering. Give 2000 lbs. for a ton, no more, no less. Make allowance for weight of bags. Do not wet coal till after it is weighed. 37-1f F. E. VANLUVEN.
